LATEST REPORTS FROM HEADQUARTERS

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Saturday Morning, Aug. 20.

The rebel army has succeeded in making its escape from Maryland. They commenced to leave about dusk on Thursday evening, and by daylight yesterday morning were all over, except a small rear-guard. They saved all their transportation, and carried off all their wounded but about 300. Between 300 and 400 rebel stragglers were taken during the day by Gen. PLEASONTON'S cavalry, who took the advance.

Nearly every house in Sharpsburgh was struck by our shells. Two were burnt, and also a large barn located in the centre of the town. The citizens who remained escaped injury by staying in their cellars. One child was killed. Two rebels, while cooking their supper on Tuesday, were killed by one of our shots passing through the kitchen.

The name given to this battle is the Antietam.

After our forces occupied the whole field, the rebel loss was found to be far greater, particularly in killed, than was at first supposed. Fully 2,500 were found lying on the field, while a larger number had been buried the day before by their friends.

Their loss in killed and wounded will not come far from 16,000 to 20,000.

Gen. STARK, of the rebel army, was killed, and Gens. RIPLEY, WALKER and HAYES were wounded.

The rebels on Thursday night burnt the railroad bridge and several houses at Harper's Ferry.

The citizens of Sandy Hook were fleeing into the country on Thursday night to escape being impressed into the rebel service and carried into Virginia.

Large details of men were made this morning to bury the remaining dead, which have become offensive.

The troops are all in excellent spirits over the result.

The rebels are still visible on the opposite shore in force. They have posted a large amount of artillery to prevent our troops from crossing the river.

The officers of this army are unanimously of the opinion that Gen. HOOKER, for his gallantry and bravery, should be made a Brigadier-General in the regular army, made vacant by the death of Gen. MANSFIELD.

THE RESULT A GREAT VICTORY.

PHILADELPHIA, Saturday Sept. 20.

The Sunday Transcript to-night received the following dispatch from the District Attorney of this city now at Harrisburgh:—

HARRISBURGH, Saturday Sept. 20.

The account of the battle of Sharpsburgh do not give any satisfactory results to the public. I was on the battle-field and saw it all.

It was a decisive victory, and a splendid triumph. Gen. MCCLELLAN'S modesty has prevented him from letting the American people know what the army has really accomplished. WM. B. MANN.

REOCCUPATION OF HARPER'S FERRY BY GEN. BURNSIDE.

PHILADELPHIA, Saturday, Sept. 20.

The Press, of this city, publishes a special dispatch, dated Middletown, 18th inst., giving particulars of the reoccupation of Harper's Ferry by Gen. BURNSIDE'S Corps—the rebels retreating, leaving cannon and stores behind, and several hundred of Col. MILES' men not paroled. The National troops crossed on the bridges, which were uninjured, and pursued the rebels as far as Martinsburgh.

OUR ADVICES FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Sept. 20.

The news to-day from the Upper Potomac fully sustains the belief of last night, that the enemy has succeeded in escaping into Virginia with the bulk of his force, and assures us that part of our army has crossed the Potomac in pursuit.

The rumors of the evacuation of Harper's Ferry, and its occupation by our troops, are confirmed.

A telegram from Dr. LETTERMAN, this morning, to Dr. Jos. R. SMITH, the Acting Surgeon-General, says that Surgeon W. J. H. WHITE, Medical Director of FRANKLIN'S Corps, was killed in the battle of Wednesday while looking after the wounded.

Twelve wagons loaded with hospital supplies were sent to Frederick this morning, via Rockville.

It is said our losses in the late battles in Maryland will reach fifteen thousand. The rebels left a large number of their wounded in our hands.

Immense quantities of hospital stores and comforts for the wounded are being sent to Frederick this evening, by railroad and in wagons, together with five hundred hospital tents.

Army supplies are being forwarded to Harper's Ferry and Edwards' Ferry, via the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

LATEST REPORTS FROM BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Saturday, Sept. 20.

The following dispatch has just been received from a special army correspondent of the Baltimore American from Keatsville, via Frederick, Sept. 19:

"The rebel army retreated during Thursday night toward the Potomac River. Gen. MCCLELLAN'S Army was all in motion at an early hour this morning, prepared to renew its offensive operations against the enemy. By 10 o'clock every road was crowded with our troops and trains moving toward the Potomac, across the Antietam Creek Bridge, while our troops, from the position I occupied, appeared to be moving along the Sharpsburgh and Williamsport roads.

Many conflicting reports were received here during the day of skirmishing with the rear guards of the enemy, who were in full flight toward the Potomac.

A gentleman who left Gen. MCCLELLAN'S headquarters before the General started, informed me at 4 o'clock that Gen. BURNSIDE had crossed the Potomac, and was harassing the rebels' rear.

The latest reports received are, that the rebels were forced to destroy a large portion of their trains, and spike and abandon much of their artillery, to prevent it falling into our hands, so closely were they pursued by the Union army.

Gen. MCCLELLAN rode out toward the front at 11 o'clock, and was loudly and enthusiastically cheered by the troops, as he rode along. The cheering of the troops could be heard a great distance."

LATEST REPORTS FROM HARRISBURGH.

HARRISBURGH, Saturday, Sept. 20.

No information has been received at Headquarters here up to noon to-day, from either of the armies in Maryland.

Private dispatches say that the enemy is not to be seen at at any point, and that Gen. MCCLELLAN is still in pursuit.

The sick and wounded of our army are expected to reach here to-day from Hagerstown.

HARRISBURGH, Saturday, Sept. 20—P. M.

There seems to be quite a difference of opinion in regard to the whereabouts of the rebel army in official circles.

This morning we were engaged in shelling the woods on the opposite bank of the river preparatory to crossing. The rebels have planted batteries at Williamsport, on the opposite side of the Potomac, to prevent the right wing of our army from crossing.

The roads are lined with guns, haversacks, blankets, &c., of the rebels. We caused great slaughter among them."

Wounded soldiers, arriving here represent the rebels as completely hemmed in. They say that Gen. MCCLELLAN'S right and left wings rest on the Potomac, whilst Gens. SIGEL and RICKETTS are keeping a lookout for them on the opposite side.

The State Militia lately sent to Hagerstown and Boonsboro' were, this afternoon, sent back into Pennsylvania.

Report says that our pickets were, this morning, driven in three miles outside of Hagerstown, and that skirmishing had been kept up throughout the whole day.

HARRISBURGH, Pa., Saturday, Sept. 20—Midnight.

There is a rumor in circulation here, brought by a "reliable gentleman" from Hagerstown, that the entire rebel army under Stonewall JACKSON had surrendered. He represents the loss of the rebels at from twenty to thirty thousand, and says that their army was totally demoralized.

LATEST REPORTS FROM FREDRICK.

FREDERICK, MD., Saturday, Sept. 20.

A gentleman, who left Boonsboro, last night, says that the firing was between ours and the rebel batteries across the river, the latter endeavoring to check our pursuit at the river banks.

LATEST REPORTS IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Saturday, Sept. 20.

A dispatch just received by mail from the Antietam battle-field, dated Wednesday, 8 P. M., gives an account of that day's battle, most of the particulars of which have already been published. The following additional points, however, are given:

As Gen. MCCLELLAN rode along the line he was most vociferously cheered, which attracted the attention of the rebels, when they commenced throwing shells, some of which fell in the ranks of the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Regiment, and they began to fall back, but Gen. MCCLELLAN himself rallied them, and they soon regained their former steadiness.

No prisoners were taken from us by the rebels. Our forces took one Georgia regiment entire. The total number of rebel prisoners captured is at least twelve hundred.

One piece of woods, after being desperately fought for four hours, was at last gained by our troops. It contains at least fifteen hundred dead of both sides, and presents a most terrible spectacle.

Our wounded are being cared for in the best way possible, but there is nothing like enough doctors here.

Capt. MYERS, of the Fourteenth New-York Regiment, was wounded.

The Fourteenth Connecticut Regimen lost largely. Five color-bearers were shot while it was engaged. Capt. WILLARD was killed. The regiment held their position for half an hour under a heavy cross fire, and finally fell back to a better position.

The Thirty-fourth New-York Regiment were flanked by two rebel regiments, but they succeeded in cutting their way out, although losing many men in doing so.

Col. HINKS, of the Nineteenth Massachusetts Regiment, who had just returned to his command after getting well of the wounds he received at Nelson's Farm, was again badly wounded while at the head of his regiment.

Major BLOOMBERGER, of the Fifth Maryland Regiment, was wounded in the thigh. Capt. BAMBERGER was wounded in the breast. Lieut. MANLEY was killed. This regiment lost heavily.

Col. CHILDS, of the Fourth Pennsylvania Cavalry acting as Brigadier-General, was killed while rallying his men.

Gen. Thomas Francis Meagher was wounded slightly. His Brigade is stated to have lost heavily.

Col. KELLY, of the Sixty-ninth New-York Regiment, was wounded in the face.

Capt. DUFFY, Lieut. WILLIAMS and Lieut. KELLY, of the Sixty-Ninth New-York Regiment, were killed. Lieut. NAGLE was wounded. This regiment did nobly, losing half its force.

Capt. WATSON, of the First Delaware Regiment was killed. Capt. RICHARDS was killed. Capt. YARDLEY was badly wounded. Capt. WOODELL was badly wounded. Lieut. CRAWALL was badly wounded. Lieut. SHARPE was wounded in the face. Lieut.-Col. HOPKINSON was wounded.

General MAX WEBER was wounded while leading his men into the fight.

Lieut. WILSON, of the One Hundred and Eighth New-York Regiment, sprained his back in getting over a fence in his hurry to chase the enemy.

Major FORCE, of Rochester, of the One Hundred and Eighth New-York, was killed.

Major TARBOX, of the One Hundred and Eighth New-York, was killed.

Lieut. DRAPER, Aid to Gen. RICHARDSON, received a ball in each leg.

Lieut. MACKEY, of Gen. MEAGHER'S Staff, was wounded.

The Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserves were badly cut up.

Capt. KISSLER was wounded.

Lieut. RISINGER, of the One Hundred and Thirtieth Pennsylvania Regiment, was wounded in the leg.

Lieut. TOMES was wounded in the thigh.

Gen. DANA was wounded.

Lieut. James M. WELSH, of the Pennsylvania Bucktail Regiment, was mortally wounded.

Maj. CROSE, of the Second Pennsylvania Reserves, was killed.

PHILADELPHIA, Saturday, Sept. 20.

The Inquirer, of this city, to-night received the following special dispatch from Frederick to-day, which says:

"I am just in from the front of our army. The rebels succeeded in crossing their entire army at Blackburn's Ford, three miles East of Sharpsburgh, between the hours of 9 o'clock on Thursday night and daybreak on Friday morning."

NEAR THE BATTLE-FIELD OF ANTIETAM, Friday, Sept. 19, 1862.

The smoke of the battle has cleared away; the Grand Army, which, in this campaign, at least, has not been thwarted in one single contemplated movement, is moving on to fulfill the object of its mission, and the enemy having fled in confusion before it, I have a moment's leisure to survey the scene of the late conflict, relate some interesting particulars, omitted in the hurry attending the preparation of my letter giving a general description of the battle, and more calmly look at the results of the campaign in Maryland.

Of the advance of the army but little need be said at this time—only that it is marching as fast as circumstances permit, and that the first great object—the driving of the enemy from Maryland—has been accomplished.

The visit of Stonewall JACKSON to this State, while attended with much evil, has not been entirely unproductive of good. There has been a deep secession current operating upon the people of this State ever since the heresy of secession assumed a tangible shape. Her people have been wheedled and cajoled with the bauble, until a large number of them were anxiously looking forward to the precious moment when they could fairly clutch it. The day which had long been deferred at length arrived, and JACKSON, with his dirty, ragged, and shoeless followers, entered this—to them—Paradise. The land was overflowing with milk and honey—or, to use a more practical figure—the land was full of just what JACKSON'S army stood most in need of—something to eat, and something to wear, and he and they luxuriated to their hearts' content. They played the rôle of gentlemanly robbers to perfection, and were so polite in their robberies that some of the people did not discover they had been dealing with swindlers until it was too late to correct the error they had made. The bloody-handed duelist cries a gentleman, and the wanton asks to be buried like a lady, so JACKSON and his horde committed the most wanton and cruel acts with a bland smile and as graceful a bow as the original Beau BRUMMELL could have made, and asked it to be borne in mind that he was polite and courteous. But with the retreating form of the rebel chief, the illusion which the secession bauble had thrown around the people began to be dispelled. They began to realize that they had been stripped of everything, and only received in return a worthless mess of pot-age, otherwise, Confederate "I. O. U's," worth, perhaps, in good times, when rags are scarce, two cents per pound. Those from whose eyes the scales did not drop at once, found their sight when MCCLELLAN'S army came along, for what the first did not steal the latter borrowed, and the upshot of the matter is, some of Maryland's more fortunate neighbors will have to supply her people with something to eat.

Rely upon it, that the raid of JACKSON into this State has forever squelched all that there was before of secessionism. The masses have tasted the tempting fruit, and found it to be like a green persimmon—very puckery and unpleasant to the taste. Gen. WOOL can remove his army, destroy his earthworks, and turn the guns of Fort McHenry seaward, without any fear of a rising in Baltimore. You cannot insult a Marylander now more thoroughly than to ask him if there are any Secessionists in his State. He at once sees two large armies passing through his fields, stripping his cornfields, butchering his cows and hogs and robbing his hen-roost.

The effect upon the rebel army must be disheartening. They had been assured that all that was necessary to drag Maryland into the whirlpool of secession was to march a large army into the State, and the people would en masse fall into the rebellion. This was what the rank and file of the rebel army believed, whether JACKSON believed it or not. He, perhaps, only thought of obtaining supplies for his army; but his soldiers talk bitterly against him for practicing deception, and threaten to deprive him of a worthless life. So that the result of this raid, as affecting the rebel cause, must be, in any event, most disastrous. Instead of obtaining 60,000 undisciplined troops and a cordial welcome, JACKSON got less than 5,000 recruits, lost at least 30,000 men, and finally has had his half demoralized army kicked out of the State. Perhaps the devil's praying friend on earth, after this experience, will desire to make a raid into some Free State—but we do not believe it. He will endeavor to fall back where, upon familiar ground, his soldiers can fight behind something, instead of meeting our troops in a manly, fair field fight.

In this connection we will state that Frederick City did have several citizens who largely sympathized with the rebellion. Two of these individuals were largely engaged in the boot and shoe business. Now, shoe leather is one of the articles STUART'S soldiers stand most in need of, and when he entered the fair city of Frederick he put a severe test to his sympathizers in that locality, by buying out whole stocks at different stores. The boot and shoe dealers mentioned were the first to put their professions into practice, and succeeded in parting with—much against their will—between them, about $20,000 worth of boots and shoes, and received in payment therefor Confederate and Richmond bank notes. While dealing out their stocks freely, and biting their lips in vexation, but not daring to remonstrate, some of their loyal neighbors, who had concealed their stocks, enjoyed themselves hugely at the expense of the Secession sympathizers, by congratulating them upon the sudden increase of their business.

But this was not the worst the rebels did in Maryland. Just upon the eastern bank of the Antietam creek, opposite the battle-ground, resides a highly respectable family, whose head is named ALFRED N. CORP. This family were peaceably engaged in their usual household duties and necessarily had to pass occasionally to a spring of water near at hand. On several occasions the women of this family were fired at by the rebel skirmishers while at this Spring, and to the credit of Gen. MCCLELLAN be it said, when his attention was called to the fact, he promptly sent a sufficient force to the vicinity to punish such outrages if repeated.

THE BATTLE-GROUND.

Late last night and early this morning I visited the scene of the most deadly conflicts during the battle yesterday, and examined particularly the plowed field where HOOKER'S, SEDGWICK'S and BANKS' troops in turn contended against the rebel hosts, and the side-hill, the cornfield and the road where FRENCH'S left was reprised, and where RICHARDSON'S Division gained so signal a triumph, and MEAGHER'S, CAULDWELL'S and BROOKES' brigades made such terrific slaughter in the enemy's ranks, and gained imperishable renown. The dead and wounded were strewn upon the places indicated, in hideous confusion. Here was a perfect winnow of Butternuts and Graybacks, interlarded with Uncle Sam's blue coats; at another point the dead and wounded rebel and Union troops were in heaps, as if designedly placed so for a funeral pyre or an auto de fe, without the combustible material; and everywhere could be seen stern, unmistakable evidence of the desperate struggle which always characterizes civil war among the whole human family, be it between a savage or civilized people. Here was the pile made by KIRBY'S Battery, there was a heap by THOMPSON'S and HAZZARD'S grape and canister, when the rebel leader, maddened to desperation by the exigencies of the hour, hurled his massed columns upon certain destruction. Scattered here and there were groups of blackened corpses, indicating but too plainly the deadly certainty with which the German New York Battery hurled its thunderbolts from the hill east of the Antietam. Mangled humanity in all its ghastly forms could be seen upon this field; to the left, to the right, behind and before, on every hand the eye beheld the horrors of the field. Mingled with the dead came up to the ear the groans of those in whose breasts there yet remained a spark of vitality, but whose lamp had nearly expired; the hopeful cases, so far as possible, were removed for medical assistance before midnight of Wednesday; the hopeless cases were allowed to remain upon the field. Some in a perfectly conscious, others in a half conscious state, while more were insensible to all worldly affairs. One of the latter class—a rebel soldier—while we were walking over the field at night, vainly attempted to rise; he had received a wound upon the temple from which the brain protruded; he clutched at the air and a helping hand was extended to him and words of sympathy were spoken, but no sign of recognition followed, and in a moment more the helpless victim fell over upon his face, and was numbered with the dead. God grant that we may never witness another such a scene. Thursday morning none of the dead had been removed, and our forces held undisputed possession of the field, so that an approximate estimate could be made of the number actually killed on either side at one point, the bodies of 110 dead rebels were counted, while there were only 12 bodies of Union soldiers—and with one single exception—where the Irish Brigade and the left of FRENCH'S Division had the hardest fight—this proportion would hold good everywhere on the battle-field. The enemy acknowledge a loss of two men killed to our one, but it would be nearer the truth to say, that they had five men killed where we had one.

INCIDENTS OF THE BATTLE.

I cannot refrain, at this time, from noticing several incidents of the battle—several of which came under my own immediate observation.

FIFTH NEW-HAMPSHIRE REGIMENT.

This regiment merits special notice. Its Colonel—CROSS—was formerly an officer in the regular army, and takes a deep interest not only in his own command, but in reference to the conduct of the campaign. He occupied the advance in Gen. SUMNER'S corps until the battle of Antietam, and distinguished himself in that engagement by being present and encouraging his men at all points. During the action he was wounded, but refused to leave the field, and at night occupied the advance line, in front of the enemy. This regiment captured the Fourth North Carolina State colors.

A DARING ACT.

While the battle was at its height on the left, the Fourth Alabama Regiment stuck their battle-flag in the ground a little in advance, as a dare for anyone to attempt the capture of it. Lieut. GRIO, of the Sixty-first New-York, rushed forward and captured it. He was shot in the neck, but held on to the flag and returned with it to his company.

MAX WEBER'S Brigade, in FRENCH'S Division, bore its part in the severe musketry contest of Wednesday last, excepting one regiment, the Fifth Maryland, which, it is alleged, was taken from the field while the result of the battle hung in the balance, by its own officers. It is stated, also, that the One Hundred and Second Pennsylvania Regiment did the same thing.

THE NINTH NEW-YORK VOLUNTEERS.

One of the most conspicuous duty regiments in the service is the Ninth New-York, otherwise known as HAWKINS' Zouaves, now commanded by Lieut.-Col. KIRKALL, Col. HAWKINS having been placed in command of a brigade. This regiment was one of the first—as its numerical designation indicates—to volunteer for the war. It was stationed first at Newport's News, and was subsequently placed in Gen. BURNSIDE'S Division, and has always one been of the reliable regiments of that command—always ready for active and the most dangerous service at a moment's notice. It has participated in all the battles which have given lustre to the name of BURNSIDE, in North Carolina and in the recent battles under Gen. MCCLELLAN, on Sunday and Wednesday last. It formed the advance of Gen. BURNSIDE'S command which went to the relief of Frederick City, and shared with the General the attentions of the people of that unconditional loyal people. The afternoon after it arrived in this city, the Ninth was ordered out toward the front on escort duty, and did not return until 10 o'clock P. M. During that night a fire broke out in the Frederick City jail, when Companies B, G and K—mostly composed of New-York firemen—were ordered out to suppress the fire, and through their agency a vast amount of property was saved from destruction. At 4 o'clock the following morning the Zouaves were ready to obey the order to advance to the front, which they did with alacrity. As the regiment, 750 strong, marched through the principal street of Frederick City the day before, its military bearing was the theme of all observers, and the regiment was most cordially cheered. Its motto is, "Always Ready for Duty."

THE SIXTY-THIRD NEW-YORK.

This regiment, always conspicuous for deeds of daring in battle, was particularly so in the battle of Antietam. The colors were shot down sixteen times, and on each occasion a man was ready to spring forward and place the colors in front. Fifteen of these gallant men were more or less severely wounded.

In Company G of this regiment, all of the commissioned and all of the non-commissioned officers, except two corporals, were either killed or wounded. When Lieut. GEO. LYNCH fell, mortally wounded, he handed to Capt. CARDEN all of his effects—watch, ring, pocket-book, sword, &c., and requested him to deliver them to his family. As Capt. C. was leaning over Lieut. LYNCH, one of his shoulder-straps was shot off, but without injuring his person. The Sixty-third is one of the regiments composing Gen. MEAGHER'S Irish Brigade. The regiments of this brigade are as follows: Eighty-eighth and Sixty-third New-York, Twenty-ninth Massachusetts, and Sixty-ninth New-York. It advanced into action under a terrible fire from rebels concealed behind a fence. They drove them from this position and leveled the fence, under the orders of Gen. MEAGHER. When this had been done, JOHN HARTIGAN, a member of Company H, Sixty-third Regiment, and only sixteen years old, went some distance in advance of the regiment with the colors, and waved them defiantly in the face of the enemy. The whole brigade gave a cheer that was heard along the lines for a mile, when it advanced up the rising ground, and drove the rebels from a strong position. Company H was commanded by Lieut. JOHN H. GLEESON, formerly of the Irish Papal Brigade in Italy. Of the eleven commissioned officers taken into the field by the Sixty-third, seven were killed or wounded. Color-bearer HARTIGAN seems to have a charmed life, for he did not receive a scratch.

HE DIED AT THE POST OF DUTY.

First Lieut. WM. H. VAN DYKE, of Co. F, Eighty-First Pennsylvania, acting Adjutant, was wounded in one arm, and called upon Sergt. PHILLIPS to help him. As PHILLIPS approached, VAN DYKE said: "See if my arm is broken, PHILLIPS! (examining it himself.) It is not, and I am going back." Just as he was about to return to duty, a shot struck him in the bowels, which proved fatal.

A BOLD ACT.

Corporal WM. ROACH, of Co. K, 81st Pennsylvania shot a Color-Sergeant, ran forward of the Company, took his cap, and, placing it upon the end of his bayonet, twirled it about, cried out to his companions: "That is the way to do it," but the member of another company in the meantime had seized the colors and carried them off in triumph. This act was done under a heavy fire of musketry, in as cool a manner and with as much deliberation, as if the regiment had been on parade. Company K had 7 wounded but none killed.

THE ENEMY DEFIED IN DEATH.

JOSEPH MATHEWS, Company D, One Hundred and Thirtieth Pennsylvania Regiment, (new) distinguished himself by advancing from his company, on the left of FRENCH'S Division, when the heavy infantry contest occurred, and firing a number of times. He was shot through the neck and about the same time through his heart. He fell at least four paces in front of the line, and, though unable to speak, after he had fallen, he waved his cap at the enemy in a defiant manner.

AN INCIDENT.

While the right was engaged Wednesday morning a member of the Pennsylvania Reserves, attached to RICKET'S command, was wounded, and while being carried from the field by four companions, a shell killed the wounded man and wounded three of the men who were removing him from the field.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

HENRY WAGER HALLECK, GENERAL-IN-CHIEF, U. S. A.

[The following sketches of the military and civil career of this eminent officer have been handed us for publication.—Ed. Times.]

This distinguished officer was born in Oneida County, N. Y., in the year 1816. On the paternal side, he can trace his descent from PETER HALLECK, a Scotch Baronet, who settled in Holland in the early part of the 17th century. His ancestors, on the maternal side, were among the earliest settlers of Central New-York, and one of the early colleges of Central New-York, founded by the Rev. Dr. HENRY WAGER, bears the name of his maternal grandfather.

Young HALLECK graduated with distinction in 1839, at the head of the class of cadets who graduated at West Point in that year, and received the appointment of Second Lieutenant in the Engineer Corps, and ordered to duty under Col. TOTTEN, now Chief Engineer of the United States Army, in the construction of Fort Adams, at Newport, Rhode Island—one of the finest fortifications on the American coast. In November, 1834, Lieut. HALLECK was detailed as assistant to Gen. GRATIOT, then Chief Engineer, and remained on duty in the Engineer Bureau until 1836, when, at the request of Col. TOTTEN, he returned to Fort Adams, assuming, at the same time, the difficult task of superintending the piers, dyke and lighthouse at Goat Island, in the same harbor. In the increase of the Corps of Engineers, July 7, 1838, he was promoted to a full-fledged Captain of Engineers, and immediately placed in the charge of building the new fortifications—Fort Trumbull and the battery at Fort Griswold, at New-London, Connecticut. These works, which have now been fifteen years completed, without repairs, are among the best constructed and most efficient of our coast fortifications, as well as among the most picturesque features in the harbor of New-London. In April, 1846, in addition to his duties at New-London, Capt. HALLECK was instructed with the construction of Fort Warren, Independence, Winthrop, and the outer public works in Boston Harbor, his reputation as an engineer officer steadily rising with each new work completed under his charge. In February, 1812, Born in war times, he is also of Mexican descent, which stimulated so much attention, that its publication in document form was called for by the Senate. In 1844 he paid a visit to Europe, and under the courtesy of distinguished French engineers, enjoyed opportunities for visiting many interesting fortresses and mathematical studies, of which his after life was a rapid reproduction. He was also the author of a "Collection of Mining Laws of Spain and Mexico," to which he had before given particular attention, as Presidents Buchanan, Jefferson and Polk also did, in the Mining Company. In 1860, the present troubles had begun, and Engineer, he acted as Aid-de-Camp to Gen. WOOL, in the forced evacuation of Virginia and Maryland, and then, as Chief Engineer of the Department of the East, Cuba and our Southern and Western States, the several volumes in which he recorded his observations and experiences during a residence of nearly four years in the Spanish Island, and Mexican Republic, which attracted

QUEENS COUNTY AGRICULTURAL FAIR

~~Opening Day of the Fashion Course.~~

Large House of What was to be Seen—The List of Prizes Awarded.

Who has heard of an Agricultural Fair at the South since the beginning of the war? Nobody. Yet we have plenty of them at the North, and the Twenty-first of the Queens County Agricultural Society, opened at Fashion Course on Thursday, was the most creditable yet held by that organization. Never have these favorite grounds appeared to greater advantage, for, from far and near, from Long Island and Manhattan Island, thousands who delight in agriculture congregated to see the sights. The roads in the vicinity were fairly blocked with carriages, while even the extensive accommodations of the Long Island Railroad were inadequate to meet the requirements of the many visitors. The same scene was repeated on Friday with a much larger attendance.

All departments of the exhibition were well worth a visit. The horticultural, stock of all kinds, farming implements and everything pertaining to agriculture, were well represented. So replete indeed was the Fair with objects of interest, that but a brief notice can be given of the most important. Entering by the grand stand, we passed into the horticultural gallery—most delightful to the olfactories and decidedly temptting to the palate. An exceedingly rare collection of exotics by McDonald & Co., of Flushing; John Cadness, of Flushing, and Isaac Buchanan, of Newtown, at once attracted attention. The former exhibited, among other novelties, the cucurbiter ovifera or egg squash, the fruit of the passion flower, Sicilian gourlic, prickly cucumber, and a fine specimen of the Gossypium herborum or Northern cotton plant. Mr. Cadness exhibited a number of varieties of growing pineppies, lycopodium or vegetable sulphur, begonia, and all three have beautiful and interesting specimens of rare plants.

Among other objects of interest in this department were flowers by Mathew Donalds and H. C. Wilson, of Astoria; varieties of apples and pears by Bloodgood Hewlett, W. H. Young, J. H. Harris, and Isaac Hicks; Wm. Supple, of Manhasset, a splended floral temple; Mrs. Henry Leverick, of Newtown, six fine varieties of grapes. From the place of Ben. Wood, Esq., there are ice-cream and apple pie watermelons, and a good assortment of vegetables. J. W. Somerindyke, of Oyster Bay, has a mammoth pumpkin, and Thomas B. Jackson, of Newtown, a basket of mammoth oysters, and Clarkson Pearsall, of Hempstead, a basket of mammoth peachblow potatoes, and Mr. Townsend D. Cook, of Locust Valley, has another basket of peachblows to match, and Garret Van Dine, of Newtown, another. In grapes there were fine samples exhibited by Wm. Bridge, of Glen Cove; David Fowles, gardener for E. Hoyt—the latter having three branches of "Muscat Alexander," a deliciously tempting white grape in mammoth clusters. Other exhibitors of note in this department are Jasper Lilly, John B. Mantel, J. C. Dunn, B. W. Strong, Samuel Lord, Mr. Gray, Geo. A. Burrows, Jas. T. Sandford and Rev. W. Anderson. In farming implements there were corn-shellers, mowers, cradlers, feed-cutters, dog churns, cheese presses, cider mills, grain threshers and separators, hay tossers, barrows, hay presses, apple-parers, and a thousand implements of farming of the latest approved patterns. The hay-pitcher seemed to be the most novel, and the farmers seemed to think it would be of great assistance in unloading hay from the wagon and stowing it in the barn. In the carriage department there were two novelties, a Russian sleigh by Chas. W. Page, of Manhasset, and a child's carriage by John Petrie. There was quite an extensive assortment of kitchen furniture, and some fine half-bushel specimens of grain, contributed by Ben Wood, J. Lorr, and A. Bedell. In thoroughbred and other stock, swine, cattle, horses and other live animals, good to eat and to ride behind, there was a fair display. The following are some of the prizes:

THE SLAVE-TRADE IN NEW-YORK.

Rearrest of John A. Machado.

About a year ago, Mr. John A. Machado, a merchant of this City, was arrested on a charge of fitting out the bark Mary Francis, and divers other vessels, for the Slave-trade; and from representations made by the United States Marshal, it was supposed that in the person of Machado the law had at length got possession of the ringleader of the Slave-traders who have so long plied their vocation in this City. The examination, however, utterly failed to substantiate the charge against the prisoner, either as respects the bark Mary Francis or any other slave-craft; and, after a few days' detention, he was discharged. There was abundance of testimony inculpating one Mrs. Watson, the reputed paramour of the prisoner; but as for Machado himself, he appeared in the transaction like the echo of his name—a mere shadow. Since that time the Marshal has been on the look-out for evidence to sustain the charge against Machado, and on Thursday last he succeeded in arresting the Captain of the Mary Francis, who, it is said, is prepared to make a full exposé of the whole affair. This Captain, whose name is John W. Perkins, on hearing of the first arrest of Machado, made himself scarce, and his whereabouts could not be ascertained until within a few days, when a person who had been arrested for uttering treasonable language, in order to get the favor of the Marshal, informed him that Capt. Perkins, for whom he had so long been in search, was at Peoria, Illinois. Deputy-Marshal J. A. Smith was at once dispatched after the Captain; but on arriving at Peoria, he was informed that the object of his search had just got married at that place, and was then absent on a wedding tour. The deputy traced the happy couple to Philadelphia, where the Captain was arrested while in bed with his new bride.

Having got possession of the important witness required, the Marshal immediately took measures for the rearrest of Mr. Machado, whom he found and took into custody as he was about embarking for Cuba in the steamer Columbia.

A preliminary examination of the case was commenced on Friday, before United States Commissioner Newton—U. S. District-Attorney E. Delafield Smith and his assistant, Mr. Andrews, appearing for the Government, and E. C. Benedict and Charles Benedict, Esqs., for the prisoner—on which occasion Capt. Perkins testified that he took command of the Mary Francis at Wilmington, N. C., in the Fall of 1860, by order of Mr. Machado and Mrs. Watson, who at that time resided with Machado, at No. 33 St. Mark's-place, in this City; that he went to Wilmington with Mrs. Watson, who told him, previous to going, that she and Machado were interested in the voyage of the Mary Francis; that the bark was to go to the coast of Africa, for negroes, and that the business was done in her name as a blind. Before the vessel started, Machado came to Wilmington and gave witness full directions relative to the voyage—what signals he was to use, to whom he was to report on the coast of Africa, &c., &c. Witness' compensation for the voyage was to be $5,000, with a bonus of $1,000 in case he took good care not to lose a single Negro.

The fitting out of the vessel, as described by the witness, was such as usually characterizes slave-trading crafts.

The examination will be resumed on Monday.

The Mary Francis, it will be recollected, was successful in her cruise, and landed a large cargo of negroes on the coast of Cuba, in the Spring of 1861.

The Mrs. Watson spoken of by the witness is no longer among the living.

About the time of the first arrest of Machado she left the country, and subsequently turned up in the city of Cadiz, where she is reported to have taken to drink, and ended her days a miserable outcast.

Military Movements in the City.

THE ENROLLMENT.

The enrollment of the City of New-York, so far as the enrolling officers are concerned, is now completed, and all that remains to be done is the copying and examining of the three sets of corrected books. This is an important work, and cannot be too highly estimated. Upon its correctness depends the equitable nature of a draft, and hence the greatest care has been exercised by Gen. Anthon in the preparation of this portion of the system. Set A is finished, with the exception of transfers. By transfer is meant that system by which the names of parties who have been enrolled at their places of business is transferred to their places of residence. The examiner, when the copyist has furnished his transfer list, takes up the book and erases the name of the party enrolled where it appears more than once on its appropriate page. Thanks to this plan, a man may be enrolled four times, as was done in some cases, yet in the engrossed books from which the draft will be made up, his name will appear only once, and that at his place of residence only. The cases, however, where the residence has been given in an indefinite manner, such as "Brooklyn," "Jersey," &c., without designating the precise locality, the party has been put down at his place of business, so that if he has two chances of being drafted, the shrewd citizen has but himself to blame. The entire work of copying, transferring, &c., will doubtless be finished about the 1st of October, making the entire time occupied in enrolling New-York and Brooklyn with 400,000 names about six weeks. The labor required to do this work, though laborious, has been done at, comparatively speaking, almost a "trifling" expense. The entire job will cost about $1,500, or about four cents a name, which fact reflects great credit upon the economical administrative abilities of Gen. Anthon and his efficient assistant, Mr. Schieren. The economy of this enrollment may be fairly judged when it is stated that the bills presented for enrollment expenses in country towns have thus far averaged from 40 to 70 cents per name. The fact speaks volumes.

During the latter part of this week a special enrollment has been made of all the markets, banks, lawyers, insurance, public and corporation offices.

Upon Mr. F. W. Widows, a very efficient enrolling officer, presenting himself at the Fulton Market, a number of the wholesale fish-dealers formed a procession, and escorting Mr. Widows, compelled each occupant of the market stands to give all necessary information to the officer.

Somewhat different was the conduct of two disciples of "Coke and Blackstone." When asked for the necessary information the gentlemen of the long robe declined to accede to the modest request, but taking down law books, commenced to argue the point. The officer being stubborn "dissented," and carried the parties to a higher Court,—his Court of Appeals—Gen. Anthon. Counsel stated their case, officer stated his. The Court intimated that brevity was his forte, so that they need not present their brief; he intended to be brief. The counsel could hand their points to the Court, who would give judgment against them, or they could stand committed for contempt. Counsel acknowledged the force of the Court's argument, gave their names and departed on their way with a sorry contempt for the law.

THE FIRST CHASSEURS.

Few regiments that went out of this City have enjoyed more popularity, or been looked after with greater pride than the one known as the First Chasseurs. When organized it was commanded by Col. John Cochrane, and his Lieutenant-Colonel was Alexander Shaler, long known, during his connection with the Seventh National Guard, as the best theoretical soldier belonging to the militia. John Cochrane is now a Brigadier-General, and Alexander Shaler is Colonel of the regiment. He has led his men with distinction in several battles, and is beloved and confided in by them as few regimental officers are. The Chasseurs have lost some of their number, and want to have their ranks filled up. To give our boys a chance to join, a recruiting office has been opened at No. 544 Broadway.

METROPOLITAN BRIGADE.

The first regiment of this brigade has marched for the seat of war. The second has some 800 men, and will be ready to go off in a few days. The third, too, is now in a forward state. It is to be commanded by Col. Benedict, and expects to be ready by the 1st of October. Lieut. M. L. Kellogg, who is recruiting for the regiment at No. 127 Reade-street, was formerly connected with the New-York Press. The Colonel and Adjutant have both been in the Police Department. The camp of the regiment is on Riker's Island.

THE COSMOPOLITAN LEGION—LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE FROM COL. CORCORAN.

In answer to an application from the Colonel of the Cosmopolitan Legion for acceptance with his regiment into the Irish Brigade, Col. Corcoran has written the following letter:

Headquarters Corcoran's Irish Legion.
Astor House, Sept. 30, 1862.

Col. T. B. Eserman—Dear Sir: I have read with great interest the call made by you upon foreigners, exhorting them to join the Cosmopolitan Guard for my brigade.

Such a patriotic step taken by you as a Frenchman causes the closest bonds of my sympathy to be revived—a sympathy which has always existed between your fellow-countrymen and mine, they having so often shed their blood together for France on the battle-field of old Europe. I have no doubt that your call will be answered by your fellow-countrymen as well as by the other foreigners who are, as you have said, 'the free representatives of all oppressed European nations.' In fact, to fight for the Union is to fight for the sacred cause upon which depend the destinies of the old and new world.

I hope you will succeed in raising the Cosmopolitan Guard, which I trust will bear off a glorious share of the laurels reserved, in the field, for the Irish Legion.

Michael Corcoran,
Brigadier-General.

IRONSIDES REGIMENT—WAR MEETINGS IN CHURCHES.

The brave work of recruiting volunteers from our earnest, noble young men who have characters to support and friends to reflect credit upon, goes on with unrelenting spirit. The meetings take place this evening in six churches of different denominations. Other gatherings will be had every evening this week and the next. This wears the right look, and promises not only a rapid filling up of the regiment, but a permanent interest in its welfare, and a guaranty for hosts of efficient friends at home, who will care for the wants of soldier families. We say God speed to the good work, and doubt not the Ironsides will march before many of the regiments which have been already months before the public.

THE NEW-YORK CITY GUARD.

The New-York City Guard, now being organized in the First Senatorial District of this City, is still progressing, with every favorable prospect of soon having its ranks full.

Col. A. M. Leichtenkost, as well as Lieut.-Col. Olmstead, are old and experienced hands in military matters, and they give cheering reports of the present state of the organization, several of the young men of this City having already signed the rolls and enlisted in the ranks as privates. Care is being taken to guard against the admission of any whose company would under any circumstances be obnoxious. As yet the post of Major and Quartermaster remain to be filled, as well as some officers in the line. The place selected for the encampment has not been fully determined, but will very probably be one of those beautiful spots on the Bloomingdale, thereby making the means of access convenient to the friends of the regiment. The headquarters at present are at No. 62 White-street.

DERYER'S ZOUAVES.

The work of recruiting for the Second Battalion in the gallant old Fifth is proceeding with marvelous dispatch; the average being forty men mustered daily; and on the 17th the number of men enlisted reached the high figure of 86. At this rate the battalion will soon be ready for departure to the seat of war. The officers of this regiment have been chosen solely for their experience and soldierly qualities. The Colonel, Major, four Captains and six Lieutenants, come from the old Fifth, and the Lieutenant-Colonel from the Third New-York Volunteers. Col. H. D. Hull is a daring and brilliant officer, and proved himself, during the never to be forgotten "seven days'" fight before Richmond, to be a true soldier. Especial attention is directed to the notice in our advertising columns of to-day, calling upon all absentees to report forthwith in order to organise the Battalion in due form.

THE THIRD REGIMENT METROPOLITAN GUARD.

The Third Regiment Metropolitan Guard is rapidly organizing, and will be ready to march about the 1st of October. Several of the companies need but few men to fill their ranks to the standard. Greater inducements are offered for enlistments in this and the other regiments of the Metropolitan Guard, than in any other City organization, inasmuch as the families of the volunteers receive special aid from a Police fund which has been created for the purpose, and will be maintained by assessments upon the salaries of the entire force. Among the recruiting officers for the Third Regiment is Lieut. M. L. Kellogg, who has established his headquarters for the present at No. 127 Reade-street, corner of Hudson, and will receive recruits at that place. Lieut. Kellogg is a young man of good attainments and excellent character. He has been connected with the New-York Press. Col. Benedict and Adjt. Leonard have long been favorably known in the Police force.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met yesterday afternoon at two o'clock, pursuant to adjournment, Alderman Jeremiah in the chair.

After the reading of the minutes,

Mr. Boole called for the reading of communications when the Clerk read the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, called for on Friday, upon the question of removal of Heads of Departments. The document gives full power to the Board to remove for cause, saying that by law the cause need not be specified. It is Mr. Benson's opinion that a head of a department, removed before the expiration of his term cannot hold over.

The opinion was referred to the Committee now having the charges against Mr. Devlin under consideration.

A veto message was read from the Mayor, returning without his approval the ordinance relative to the establishment of a Military Hospital in Central Park.

The Comptroller submitted a semi-monthly report of disbursements for the aid of families of volunteers. The figures are as follows:

Number of families relieved	13,295
Adults	13,184
Children	18,351
Total	31,535
Amount of money disbursed	$56,694

A secession flag was received from the Mayor, with an explanatory note, saying that the flag was the first secession banner which floated in Florida. It was recently captured there. The flag was ordered to be placed in the Governor's Room.

The Board of Aldermen adjourned to Monday at 1 o'clock.

Rural Councilings.

The first meeting of the Common Council of our sister city, Brooklyn, which once delighted to be called "rusurban," since their vacation will be held Monday night. Several ineffectual attempts have been made to call a special meeting of the Board of late, but the members were making the best of their advantages, and it was found impossible to convene a quorum in the city, as the members were scattered in every direction, some even sailing on a European tour. The Mayor, however, has been anxious to present some communications of importance for the consideration of the Board, and it is difficult to state the extent to which they may have accumulated by the delay. The Mayor's peculiar notions of economy apparently do not agree with the liberal views of the Board, and they had the presumption, at their last session, to pass measures on which the Mayor had placed his official veto. The Mayor, of course, was not at all pleased with this action, and reports at the City Hall have it that he had threatened to call in the aid of the

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

A dispatch from the headquarters of Gen. McCLELLAN'S army, dated yesterday morning, states that the rebel army had succeeded in making its escape from Maryland. It appears that they commenced to move about dusk on Thursday evening, and by daylight on Friday they were all over the Potomac, with the exception of a small rear guard. They got over all their transportation, and all their wounded with the exception of about three hundred. Quite a number of stragglers were captured during the day by our advance of cavalry. At last accounts the rebels were still visible on the opposite shore in force, and they had posted a large number of cannon to prevent our troops from crossing. Our troops were all in excellent spirits. Our Washington dispatches inform us that a portion of them crossed the Potomac yesterday in pursuit of the flying rebels.

The National Intelligencer states that Gen. SIGEL has been on duty in and near Washington ever since the return of the army from the line of the Rappahannock River. His command is also near at hand, and has not been called upon to encounter any new danger since its service under Gen. POPE. Gen. SIGEL'S corps is not and has not been with Gen. McCLELLAN during his campaign in Maryland.

It is again asserted that Gen. BURNSIDE occupied Harper's Ferry very soon after its surrender by the rebels, the latter retreating, leaving cannon and stores behind, and several hundred of Col. MILES' men, not paroled. The authority for this assertion is a dispatch to the Philadelphia Press from Middletown, dated the 18th inst. It is further stated that the bridges were uninjured, and that the National troops passed over them and pursued the retreating rebels as far as Martinsburgh. We hope the Government will let us know the exact truth about Harper's Ferry soon.

Our Washington dispatches, received late last night, state that the rumors regarding the reoccupation of Harper's Ferry are confirmed.

With regard to the surrender of Harper's Ferry to the rebels, the National Intelligencer has the following: "We have been informed, on good authority, in regard to the surrender of the Harper's Ferry post—and we state the fact in extenuation of the blame which we have seen thrown on Col. MILES for the act—that the necessity of a surrender had become so clear and unmistakable that the painful step was resolved on with the concurrence of all the superior officers present." In connection with this, we quote the following note from Col. MILES to Col. FORD, regarding the importance of holding possession of Maryland Heights:

HARPER'S FERRY, Sept. 13, 1862.

Col. Ford, Commanding Maryland Heights:

Since I returned to this side, on close inspection, I find your position more defensible than it appears when at your station, covered as it is at all points by the cannon of Camp Hill. You will hold on, and can hold on until the cows' tails drop off. Yours,

D. S. MILES, Colonel Second Infantry.

By the arrival at this port of the steamship Roanoke, we have advices from New-Orleans to the 13th—four days later. The news is unimportant. Matters appear to be proceeding very quietly there. The secesh element, on the reception of the news of the battles before Washington through the Southern telegrams, became somewhat bold, but no difficulty had occurred, and none was apprehended. We receive no intelligence of any military movements.

The Washington Star of Friday states that some portions of the Pennsylvania militia, assembled recently for the defence of their State, refused to march into Maryland to defend Pennsylvania there from invasion. For the credit of Pennsylvania, which has already furnished so many excellent troops for the field, we trust the Star is mistaken.

GENERAL NEWS.

At a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen yesterday, a communication was received from the Corporation Counsel, giving it as his opinion that the removals of Heads of Departments made by the Board at its previous meeting was perfectly legal, and within the province of the Board. The Mayor returned a veto of the ordinance establishing a Military Hospital in the Central Park. A semi-monthly report of the disbursements in aid of the families of volunteers was received from the Comptroller, from which it appears that the number of families relieved was 13,295, comprising 13,184 adults and 18,351 children. The amount of money disbursed was $56,694. The first secession flag that was raised in Florida was presented to the Board by the Mayor, and ordered to be placed in the Governor's Room.

The funeral exercises over the body of the late Gen. RENO took place in Boston on Friday, at Trinity Church. A large number of men, eminent in civic and military life, were present, including Gov. ANDREW and Staff, Adjutant-Gen. SCHOULER, Brig.-Gen. ANDREWS, and Col. BURRIL, with many officers of regiments now in that vicinity.

The funeral of Col. FLETCHER WEBSTER took place at his residence in Marshfield on Wednesday, the 10th. By request, the oaken box containing the coffin of his father, was opened, and the metallic cover of the glass removed. The lineaments and features of the great statesman are said by an observer to have been as natural as when, ten years ago, he was given to the grave.

The demand for Breadstuffs, on Saturday, was less active, and prices favored buyers. Provisions were in fair request, as were also the principal kinds of Groceries, Fish, Wool, Hay, Hops, Tallow and Tobacco, at uniform quotations. Limited transactions were reported in Cotton, Hemp, Metals, Oils and Naval Stores. Whisky was heavy and a shade cheaper. Moderate Freight engagements were reported, with 552 vessels, of all classes, in port.

CULTIVATING A THANKFUL SPIRIT.—The rebel Congress recently passed resolutions of thanks to Gen. ROBERT E. LEE, and other officers in command, for leading the rebel armies into Maryland. Will not those sagacious statesmen, with equal promptness and emphasis, when they hear the result of the battle of Antietam, thank their noble General for leading them back again?

The By-Gone Week—Its Battles and Its Triumphs.

The week that has just passed away will, for all coming time, be one of the most memorable in our history, and in the progress of this gigantic war. It has seen three great battles less than a hundred miles from the National Capital, and involving the ownership of that capital; while there has not been a day, nor hardly an hour, when there was not brisk, though desultory, fighting going on along some part of our extended line. It opened with the rebel army planted on Maryland soil, vast in numbers, defiant in spirit, and exultant in the assured hope of victory. It closed, we hope and believe, with Maryland free from the polluting tread of the rebel army; and with that army so fearfully cut up in battle, disappointed in hope, and broken in spirit, that it will never be able to present such a front again, and, if properly proceeded against, never be able to reorganize itself at all.

Every battle of the week has been called indecisive, and, as applied to the decision of the rebellion, they were so; yet every one of them was a success. At the close of every one of them we had forced the rebels from their positions and driven them back; after each one of them, the rebels retreated; and at the conclusion of the whole, the rebels acknowledged the complete failure of their schemes, as announced by themselves, by decamping from Maryland, which they had come to liberate; by fleeing from the borders of Pennsylvania, which they had come to invade; and by giving up their chance of capturing Washington—that object dearest to the rebel heart. Their crossing the Potomac into Virginia is a confession that their campaign in Maryland was a failure. By it they have effected no Confederate military or political purpose whatever.

The battle, or rather battles, of Sunday last, as we now know them, are seen to have been about as hot and well fought engagements as we have had in the war. The enemy's positions were of enormous strength; and the unflinching valor of our troops in ascending the hills and heights in the face of the rebel artillery and musketry, driving them from every position, and forcing them to a precipitate retreat, are worthy of immortal commemoration. In these battles, however, we had only about thirty thousand of our troops engaged, and it was but the prelude to the greater operations that were to follow. On Monday morning occurred the great disaster of Harper's Ferry; and on the same day, JACKSON crossed to this side of the Potomac, and joined his forces with those in Maryland; while all day skirmishing was kept up between the rear-guard of the rebels we had fought on Sunday and our pursuing columns. Tuesday morning the battle was renewed between the two armies; but night closed, according to the telegraphic dispatches, "with no decisive issue." Wednesday was the grand and memorable day of the week and of the war. From 5 in the morning till 7 at night, two hundred thousand men confronted each other in deadly array; and the stars that night looked down upon twenty thousand foemen "killed and wounded" who in the morning were in health and vigor. Such fields are few in a nation's history—few in the history of the world; and we could hope that we had seen the last of them in this awful war. Next morning the thinned and shattered columns of the rebels began their dismal march out of Maryland. Their escape over the river could not be prevented; and for obvious military reasons McCLELLAN'S army could not then pursue them in full force. But enough cavalry, artillery and infantry were sent after them to terribly harass and cut up their rear and flanks; which was kept up, it appears, as long as the rebels were engaged in crossing; and this morning we have a dispatch that our columns in pursuit have actually gained the other side of the Potomac.

Thus has closed this sanguinary week of battles. We have had only two other weeks during the war which can compare with it in terrible interest—the last week of June, when McCLELLAN fought the seven days' battles on the Peninsula; and the last week of August, when POPE fought the four days' battles near Bull Run. Both of the former weeks, however, were disastrous to our arms; while this week the greatest damage has been inflicted on the rebel cause that it has suffered since the war began.

A WORD ABOUT STONEWALL JACKSON.—How shall history ever be written? Here is a man, Stonewall JACKSON to wit, whose ways and works are matters of daily interest to us all—a man of our own times, about whom the truth is comparatively easy to be known—and yet the origin, antecedents and training of the man are debated over as if he were a dead Egyptian, or one of Artaxerxes satraps turned to dust. Not civilians only but soldiers, and not only volunteer soldiers but West Pointers, whom popular superstition invests with all kinds of wisdom, quarrel and make bets as to the man's history while he is yet alive and most vigorously kicking. What will they not do when he is dead?

Once more, then, for all, let us state what is definite and positive about Stonewall JACKSON. And, first, to clear away misconceptions: He is not a graduate and he never was a student of Yale College. In this point he has been confounded with HENRY R. JACKSON, of Georgia, once our Minister to Austria, and a Colonel of volunteers in the war with Mexico. He is not at present the son-in-law of Rev. Dr. JUNKIN. That divine was the father of the first wife of Stonewall JACKSON, whose present wife is a sister of the wife of Maj.-Gen. D. H. HILL, of the Confederate army.

Maj.-Gen. THOMAS J. JACKSON, of Virginia, entered the Military Academy at West Point in the class of 1842, with Maj.-Gen. AMBROSE P. HILL, of the Confederate army, and Maj.-Gen. GEORGE B. McCLELLAN, of the United States army. He graduated well up in his class in 1846, was brevetted Second Lieutenant of Artillery in July of that year, went to Mexico with MAGRUDER'S Battery, was brevetted Captain for "gallant and meritorious conduct at Contreras and Cherubusco" in August, 1847, and Major for "gallant and meritorious conduct at Chepultepec" a year after. He resigned his commission in the army in 1852, and at the outbreak of the rebellion was Professor in the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington in that State. Whether he prayed himself into the rebel army, as the popular story goes, or not, we do not pretend to know. The fact, if it be a fact, would be a curious subject for psychological inquiry, for it is related with equal emphasis that at the same time and place Dr. JUNKIN prayed himself into directly the opposite position from his quondam son-in-law. That Stonewall JACKSON (whose soubriquet has now become, to all intents and purposes, a part of the man) is really a man of an extremely pious temper seems to be unquestionable. In this particular he is the John Brown of the Southern rebellion, and deserves from us the tribute which HENRY A. WISE paid to the fanatic of Harper's Ferry, that he is as brave a man as ever lived, and as sincere as he is obstinate.

The Battle of Antietam.

It has not unfrequently been seen that two powerful men would wrestle together and one bring the other down with a heavy fall. The two would quickly rise again, but instead of renewing the struggle, one would turn away in silence from the ring. To the eye it might seem at the moment that no hurt was done, but that a like contest might any day be renewed between them.

All a mistake, it has often proved. Follow the retiring contestant and learn perhaps that his singular and unexplained withdrawal from the struggle was his involuntary obedience to the summons of death—that the shock of the fall had ruptured a vital blood-vessel, or stunned the brain with a death-blow; and he was moving off literally a dead man, in sole and silent procession to his fore-doomed funeral.

We believe it is such a case we witness on the Upper Potomac to-day. It was a battle of the giants we had there on Wednesday last. The victorious heroes of Fair Oaks and Malvern Hill, where the Union cause was baptized in fire and blood, met the battle-tried hosts that carried Gaines' Hill by storm, and twice sowed with our dead the plains of Manassas. Each army had its best loved leaders, each had its ranks full, each felt that the world watched the struggle, and that all mankind had an interest in the result. Never in all history was a more honorable battle fought. No stragglers limped or crept to the rear. No column gave way save when blown back by the whirlwind of flame from the cannon's mouth. No regiment, however stript by leaden hail of its officers, was left without a man still worthy to lead it, and no officer was left alone in the field to deplore that he had led cowards to the fight. From sunrise to sunsetting, with encroachment at each end of the day on darkness, the earth shook under the mighty battle, and at night the panting combatants rested on the field. The day after, the Union heroes were the declared victors; and in the shades of evening, the vanquished rebels retired from the ground whereon they had provoked the contest, and which they had advertised their own people and the world they meant permanently to hold!

The retreat of the rebel army is not its defeat only: it is its demoralization and its death-blow. It marches away as the doomed wrestler does—not to study a renewal of his grapple, but because his heart is sick of the arena from which death summons him; he would "turn his face to the wall" and die! How can the flower of Southern chivalry—the aggregation of Southern strength—the personification of its enthusiasm and daring—meet its appalled Government and people, in its retreat from its supposed victorious invasion? What "spring" is there in all the Southern resources for war to "take up the recoil" of this terrible disaster? An advancing army may gather food and forage from an extended agricultural district, for it commands its own time and rate of progress. A beaten and retreating army can do no such thing; for its movements are compulsory. The goading of artillery in pursuit gives no rest; it has no regard to hunger of horses or men; its order is that of a cruel master, "Onward—onward—to the death."

We have citizens who bewailed the war for freedom as almost lost, a short time ago, so much did they distrust the skill and power of our armed resistance to rebellion. Some of them revived but little when the news of Wednesday stirred the hearts of patriots with confidence and joy. When Thursday night found the enemy defeated and flying, the doubters became suddenly fierce to desperation. They demanded, in the name of an outraged country, why the fruits of the grandest victory of modern wars had not been reaped in the capture of 150,000 prisoners, with arms in their hands!

We shall not now argue this matter. We have the confidence to declare the battle of Antietam one of the greatest ever fought—its victory substantial and its fruits imperishable. Its effects will be seen and felt in the destinies of the Nation for centuries to come.

TOO YOUNG MEN IN THE ARMY.—We cannot help noticing that in the regiments now passing to the seat of war, there is a greater proportion of very young men than have been enlisted any time during our national trouble. If this occurred from a scarcity of older and consequently more able-bodied recruits, it should meet with no protest from us, but the case is not so, and their appearance in the ranks must be attributed alone to the ardor of youth and the anxiety of each recruiting officer to fill his command.

All old soldiers know the danger of taking lads from daily life and attempting to make soldiers of them, and especially is the experiment hazardous at this time, when our new levies will be expected to go immediately into the field. NAPOLEON, who perhaps will be admitted good authority, if not classed in those past days among the old fogy school of soldiers, wrote to the Legislative Senate, in the campaign of 1809, after asking for a new levy; "I must have grown men; boys serve only to incumber the hospitals and roadsides." At this time he had marched but a short distance into Austria, and yet before reaching Vienna, all the hospitals were filled. It was different in the campaign of 1805, which preceded Austerlitz, when, notwithstanding a march of twelve thousand miles, there was but little sickness or loss. In this campaign his men had seen two years' service, and none were less than twenty-two years of age.

All medical authorities will agree that enlistments under twenty only serve to retard the movements of an army and fill the hospitals; and all authorities in military surgery will agree that very young men, though they may be brave and daring in action, if they can be brought into it in proper physical condition, shrink under the knife, and as a consequence, die under the exhaustion of amputation or severe operations.

These facts are worthy the attention of recruiting officers and our military authorities. A little precaution is oftentimes better than a thousand recruits.

The Rebels on Civilized War.

The Confederate Government is evidently advancing in civilization. Its Senate, a few days ago, defeated a bill which proposed to legalize the guerrilla warfare and bushwhacking, which have been practiced by their predatory bands of murderers for a year past, under the polite name of partisan ranging. And now we learn that their Congress has adopted resolutions authorizing negotiations with the United States Government, on the manner of conducting the war so as to "mitigate its horrors!"

This is amazingly cool. Never has any professedly civilized people conducted war with more lawlessness and atrocity than have the rebels, from the beginning of their revolt. And never has such cruelty been met with more magnanimity and forbearance than by the National armies and National Government. The rebels have outraged and profaned the bodies of the dead, packed our soldiers in filthy prisons, and murdered them for daring to look into heaven's fresh air; they have confined many in solitary dungeons, with cruel threats of hanging in revenge for acts of others; they introduced the custom of picket shooting, which is not battle, but murder; and of bushwhacking, which is not war but assassination; and of cotton burning, which is not a blow at the enemy but an attack on the material interests of mankind. They have made red their hands with the blood of their own citizens, as in East Tennessee, for refusing to join them in their national crime of treason; and startled the seas with the guns of pirate cruisers, sailed by men who hold to the motto, "dead men tell no tales."

Against this record of cruelty and atrocity the National Government has no offset, but that of Christian forbearance and a faithful adherence to the rules of war that the civilized world has established and everywhere recognizes. And in the face of all this, the rebel Government professes to lead the way in reform, and invites us to treat with them for the adoption of a mode of mitigating the horrors of war! By all means, let them be gratified. We shall be glad to know what they regard as the "horrors of war," and what they will propose as its amenities.

A GOOD IDEA—PUBLISHING THE LIST OF EXEMPTS AND THEIR DISEASES.—A Doylestown (Penn.) paper, with commendable enterprise, publishes, in neat roman type, a list of persons in that town claiming exemption from draft, and the reason assigned in each case. The list is a long one, and unveils pages of human infirmity and novel diseases that are not met with in the chirurgeon's ordinary practice. A more dismal mustering of the "maimed, lame, halt and blind" it would be difficult to imagine, unless one had the roster of the unfortunates who in olden time were wont to gather around the waters of Bethesda on dewy mornings.

It appears from this statement that there are very few inhabitants of Doylestown who possess perfect powers of seeing, hearing and speaking; and that the one-armed and one-eyed enjoy a sad and unenviable majority. So many diseases permanently unfitting a man for bearing arms seem to have prevailed in that unhappy town, that we shrink from the task of recapitulation. Singularly enough, too, it is that portion of the population whose ages range between eighteen and forty-five—commonly the most lusty period of life—that seems most particularly afflicted. Some of the reasons assigned by the would-be exempts are valid enough in all conscience. Thus, one man cannot bear arms because he has weak legs; another, in addition to having only one arm to bear arms with, has conscientious scruples on the subject; but dyspepsia seems to be the pet complaint in Doylestown; very few of the people are free from it. The men that have no stomach for the fray are many. Now, of all the queer reasons ever assigned for exemption from military duty, we fancy that dyspepsia bears away the palm of eccentricity. Exercise is a sovereign remedy for the complaint, and special pains should be taken to draft all troubled with it. The "Dyspeptic Brigade" would be an excellent title for the organization, throwing the veteran corps of straight-limbed, ripe-shouldered exempts, proposed by Mr. HOTALING, into a sad and sickly shade.

Were this plan of our Doylestown exchange to be universally adopted throughout the country, fewer claims for exemption would be filed, we fancy. For it must be excessively unpleasant to have one's little ailments thus made public. It would materially injure a young man's prospects in life to have it known that his liver was constitutionally deranged or his digestion bad. Visions of having a wife and tea-kettle of one's own at some day not far distant, might be rudely scattered, the day might be indefinitely postponed. For let it be once made public that a man had got the marasmus, and ten chances to one he would very soon get the mitten. There is no telling what incalculable mischief might be done, nor where it might end. Most men would prefer enlisting to encountering such fearful risks. Sooner than be bored with serial inquiries about their health, most young men would prefer to be shot at. By all means let us have complete lists of those claiming exemptions and the reasons. Nothing will more promote voluntary enlistments. It is worthy of remark, that of the number claiming exemption in Doylestown very few obtained it. Weighed in the physical balance not one in a hundred was found wanting—it was the spirit that was weak and not the flesh.

THE CAPITULATION AT HARPER'S FERRY—A SURRENDER THAT IS A DISGRACE.—When the time comes for an official investigation into the surrender of Harper's Ferry, it will be the duty of the military tribunal to seek out also the party responsible for the terms on which the capitulation of the garrison was made. By these terms, the enormous advantage which the enemy gained in the possession of this all-important position, was heightened by the blundering imbecility which prompted the acceptance of parole for the prisoners, thus pushing eleven or twelve thousand men out of the service of the United States.

It is self-evident that if the commandant of the post had refused to accept parole for the force under him, he would have placed Gen. JACKSON in the difficult dilemma of either taking them with him or releasing them unconditionally. There is very little likelihood that he would have done the former. To have carried with him this huge inert mass, which he would have been compelled to subsist, and with the constant danger of their escape before him, would have been an embarrassment which he would have thought twice of before accepting. There is, in fact, little or no doubt that if Gen. WHITE—for we take it he was the party with whom the terms of capitulation were arranged, Col. MILES having been mortally wounded before transactions commenced—had simply refused parole, the whole force would have been unconditionally released. JACKSON was in such haste to be off into Maryland, that we are told a number of our troops were thus released, and a little persistence would have compelled the same disposition of all. But even if the rebels had been in a position to hold them as prisoners, it would have been better that they should have surrendered in that character, as, from the number of rebel prisoners held by us, their speedy exchange was almost certain. They would then have been able to have reëntered the service, whereas the terms of their parole bind them not to take up arms against the rebel authority during the war. If they had been put under ground, they could not have been made more useless to their country than they now are.

We do not wonder that the surrender drew tears of grief and rage from the men, for it was a plight to madden any one capable of the emotions of a soldier or a patriot. A prompt and stern retribution should make such disgraceful surrenders a perilous enterprise hereafter.

WRITE TO THE SOLDIERS.—There are many of our readers who earnestly desire to do something for the army, not only to increase its numbers by hurrying forward recruits, not only to care for the comfort of the soldiers who have come back with wounds or disease upon them, but to help those who still remain in its ranks, who have just been baptized in the bloody sea of battle, and upon whom are to fall the burdens and perils of the future. We can suggest one thing which many among us can do, and which, though it is but a little thing to do in individual instances, may yet be productive of great results, if done by all who can do it.

Our army has been through a series of severe battles, accompanied by tremendous labors and great privations. An officer of one of the cavalry regiments told us that they were on the move almost continually for five days and four nights, the saddles not being removed from the horses, which only got two feeds of hay during all that time. And this is but an index of what the whole army has for a long time been undergoing. In addition to these toils and privations there came for a time the depressing influences of defeat and retreat, which are always hard to bear; but which again are happily followed by success and victory. NAPOLEON declared that moral force in an army was to physical force as two to one and every means should be used at once to sustain the moral tone, to encourage our soldiers, in the literal meaning of the word; and so we earnestly urge every one of our readers who has a friend in the army, at once to write to him. Send him words of cheer. Tell him how much is being done at home—how high is the spirit of patriotism—how fast the new regiments are being filled up. It will cheer him to know that help is coming. Stir up his love for the cause—spread before him the greatness of the principles for which we fight. Remind him of the glory of success and of the shame of failure in our great undertaking, which depends so much upon the soldier's courage and strength. Appeal to his love for his country and his friends to his self-respect and the call of duty upon him. Send to him a coal from the fires which glow throughout the homes of the North, and remind him that the whole world is gazing with eager eye upon the struggle in which we are engaged, whose results will not pass away at once, but will, for centuries, be felt throughout the globe.

If every one who can would do this, these myriad sparks from home would raise a mighty flame; these myriad electrical currents from the hearts of the people converging upon one point would charge the clouds of war with bolts before whose stroke rebellion would shiver and fall.

IN FRONT OF RICHMOND—McCLELLAN AND KEARNY.—We find the following paragraph in the Milwaukee Daily Wisconsin. It relates to a matter of very great importance in the history of this war, and one which, when the proper time shall come, will give rise to a good deal of inquiry and criticism:

"During the battles before Richmond, when the rebels were pressing us so sorely on the right and left flanks, Gen. KEARNY held the centre. He had come to the conclusion, from reconnoissances, that the rebels were very weak in the centre, and it was the time to make a push for Richmond. His division was only a few miles from the city, and he was confident from his military experience that he could succeed. He asked McClellan's permission to make the movement. McClellan positively refused. It should be borne in mind that KEARNY had been all through the Mexican war, and in three battles to McCLELLAN'S one. He was a man of conceded ability and had grown grey in the service. So his conviction was not that of a boy, but of an able military chieftain. But this was not all. After our right wing was driven back, McCLELLAN ordered KEARNY to evacuate the strong position which he held. He was so deeply moved at the humiliation of retiring when he felt Richmond was within our grasp, that the noble officer wept. It was moving to witness the sorrow of this brave and strong man, in obeying an order which he deemed so injurious to his country."

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 2, 1862.

GARIBALDI has, for the past week, nearly absorbed public attention. He is wounded and a prisoner, on his way to be tried by the Senate at Turin. There have been disturbances, and may be more, but the Government sees the necessity of putting them down with the strong hand. The strong hand is the order of the day on both Continents. No doubt GARIBALDI has the sympathy of a large party in England and in Europe, but the danger of French intervention in Naples was imminent. It is presumed that this danger is past, and the American war takes its place again as the question of absorbing interest.

The feeling of the past week has been one of disappointment and a kind of contemptuous pity. Nothing turns out as people believed it would. When the war began, nine-tenths of the English people believed the negroes would rise in insurrection. "Why do not the negroes rise?" was almost the last exclamation of Mrs. HARRIET BROWNING. The next disappointment was in the expectation, by the Abolitionists proper, of an Abolition war. The financiers have been disappointed in the triumph of National credit and a paper currency, and those who expected to see a people revolting against taxation and conscription, have been disappointed not less than the rest.

The Times gives the American people credit for an extraordinary degree of ardor, patience, forbearance, and many other good qualities. It is certain that Europe has been astonished at the exercise of qualities Americans were not supposed to possess. They believe that the people of the North, as well as those of the South, are in earnest, and that they are ready to make every possible sacrifice to achieve what they have deliberately undertaken—the conquest of the South, and the restoration of the Union.

It is true that the favorite theory here is that of moral insanity. But it is the North that is crazy. The South is sane enough. When the most intelligent Englishmen are called upon to explain the causes of the existing war, they attribute it to an insanity which suddenly overspread the people of the Northern States. The speech of Gen. CASSIUS M. CLAY, and the articles in newspapers in reprobation of England, are pointed to as evidences of madness. "What have we done to deserve it?" say the English. "Have we not borne with a blockade that has brought upon us ruin and starvation? Have we not permitted even our own ports to be blockaded? Have we not steadily refused intervention?"

I do not know what peculiar sources of information Gen. CLAY may have; but I advise him not to be too sure of the friendship of the Emperors of France and Russia. They were with England in the affair of the Trent. It has been again and again asserted here and in high quarters, that the Emperor of the French has more than once proposed intervention. There is good reason to believe that he has given much more hope to Mr. SLIDELL than Earl RUSSELL or Lord PALMERSTON have ever given to Mr. MASON. I have reason to believe that the views of the leading Powers of Europe are almost identical. Unless the war assumes a new phase—unless Gen. CLAY shall be able to do what other Generals have failed in doing, the Emperors of France and Russia, as well as the Government of Great Britain, will in a few months longer acknowledge the independence of the Confederate States, and take such steps as they may consider best for putting an end to a war which they look upon as opposed to all their interests. There is not one leading Power in Europe that wishes to see the American States reunited, consolidated, and made what it would be, a great military and naval power, not even Russia.

A week ago even the Garibaldians were joining in the clamor against the war in America. Were it not for this insane and useless war, they said, America could throw her power into the scale, and save Southern Italy from LOUIS NAPOLEON. But it is not so certain yet that VICTOR EMANUEL can govern Italy. What aroused GARIBALDI may do more. There is no doubt that certain guarantees were given to Russia and Prussia, to secure their recognition of the Italian Kingdom. The Italian people may still refuse to abide by that agreement.

I believe that LOUIS NAPOLEON has more heartily accepted the sequel to the arrangement of Villafranca, and that he will not be sorry to go back to that point for a new departure.

The effect of these European movements can only be to leave America more free to fight her battle, without foreign intervention. Up to this time the real people of the North have been but the spectators of the fight. "Will the people of the North stand the conscription?" is the question here. The ready answer is, that the people will stand, and will do, whatever they have determined shall be done. Just so long as the people of the North think it is their duty and interest to prosecute the war, they will do it, and neither men nor means will be wanting; and the day that a majority of the people wishes to see the war ended, it will be done. No Government can prolong the war one day after the people determine that it shall cease, and no Government can stop the war until its object is attained, unless the people shall voluntarily relinquish that object. The simple reason why the illegal and unconstitutional acts of the Government have been borne, was because they were indorsed by public opinion. Public opinion made the war—public opinion will end it in its own time and fashion. President and Cabinet are but the creatures of this controlling public opinion.

Europe cannot understand this, because there is not in Europe such a Government. Public opinion—the opinion of the great mass of the people—does not exist in England. There is a governing class, but even its opinion acts but slowly. The Government does as it pleases, with a certain reference to the feelings and interests of certain classes, and the public accepts, grumblingly or otherwise, the decision. To-day, for instance, in this most important matter of the war, the Government decides not to interfere. The public grumbles, but assents. To-morrow, if the Government should send a fleet to open the cotton ports, it would be all right. The great mass of the people presume that it is all right, and know precious little about it. They have not even a remote conception of millions of intelligent people deciding upon national policy and making war or peace—so difficult is it for one people to judge another. The people of the North are actually ruled here, as if they were forced to carry on a war by a despotic Government, when every American knows that the war will cease, and must cease, the moment there is a manifest majority against it; and that the only possible despotism in America is that which a majority may exercise over a minority. When Englishmen can be made to understand this, they will know something about the war in America.

The news by the Arabia on the 29th, disappointed the hopes of a speedy break-down of the North and end of the war. Cotton and cotton goods went up in Manchester. Yarns rose two or three pennies in a pound, and cloths two or three shillings in a piece. Stocks were bought up by speculators; even women, quite unconnected with trade, went into the markets and buying goods on speculation. The question—"Will they stand the Draft?" is answered. The hope and prediction that an attempt to enforce it would produce an outbreak in the North have failed, and only one hope of a speedy end to the war remains. That is a reorganization and success of the Democratic Party. But the fact that a majority of the soldiers now fighting for the Union were once members of the Democratic Party, and probably voted against Mr. LINCOLN, makes this rather a forlorn hope. The Times gives a leader to a speech of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, delivered somewhere, but it fails to make it appear that he meets with any formidable response. The opinion is settling down to the sullen, desperate conclusion that the war must go on until one side is utterly beaten or both are exhausted. The Government is called upon to form a Cotton Commission. That is a

STATE OF THE REBEL STATES.

[illegible] OF SOUTHERN GOVERNMENTS.

[illegible] Governments of Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas [illegible] have issued an address to the people [illegible] of which the following is an extract:

"We have never abandoned you, and are well satisfied that, in a short time, the proper steps will be taken by him carefully preserving the integrity of our [illegible] where it has not yet been polluted, and for driving the enemy back from our soil, by interposing a stubborn resistance to his further advance at every point.

"We hope every confidence in the Confederate authorities will believe that they will fully sustain the policy of the Government here, and provide amply for the future defence. But in order that they may be able thus to defend us, it behooves us all to be at work.

"Let every firearm be repaired, and every gunsmith and machine in Iron, and every mechanic be employed in [illegible] the material for war. Let beauty sit [illegible] at the spinning-wheel, the loom, and with [illegible] needle, never wearying in preparing the necessary articles of clothing for the brave soldiers of our cause, who stand between her and infamy and misery, [illegible] impassable bulwark. Let all the warlike [illegible] of these great States be brought to light. It [illegible] and life we fight, and a good God has [illegible] to us in this fair land all the material that brave men need to defend their homes and their honor.

"Let not despair enter any heart. A bright ray of light comes to us from the direction of the tomb of Washington. Again have our brave sons on the soil of Virginia driven back and almost destroyed and utterly demoralized the greatest and best army of the North. It will be months before he can recover from the blow. We will have a breathing time again before he makes his next effort. Let us diligently use the golden opportunity, and prepare by every means in our power for the conflict that is still inevitable.

"As to the final result, fellow-citizens, judging by the history of the past eighteen months, can you doubt it?

"Fleets on the coast and on our rivers, at points easily assailed by gunboats, we have had no cause to complain of the result.

Witness Bethel, Manassas, Oak Hills, Lexington, Leesburgh, Belmont, Shiloh and Chickahominy; our [illegible] have shown on every field a desperate valor that has wrung reluctant plaudits from our hated foes. Whenever ordered to advance, they have done so regardless of the danger, and at the word of command have crowded the road to death as to a festival.

"With such soldiers and such incentives to action, and with all present causes of complaint in the course of speedy removal, we again say to you, be of good cheer. There is everything to encourage us, and you may be assured that it is our fixed and unalterable purpose to contest every inch of ground with the enemy. In putting you by your past patriotism, we shall not [illegible] only rely on you for your hearty and efficient co-operation.

"In fine, be hopeful and resolute, and a just God will help and protect, whilst brave hearts will fight with the right.

"Submission or subjugation places the feet of the oppressor upon your neck, yields up your noble women to BUTLERS, and degrades or drives into exile your children.

"A people united and determined to be free can never be conquered; remember this; gird on your swords, shoulder your rifles, and be ready for the word of command when given by the Government of your choice and affection."

WIZFALL ON A MILITARY DESPOTISM.

Senator WIGFALL, in the rebel Senate, on Friday, the 12th, spoke as follows:

Mr. WIGFALL was not, like the Senator from Mississippi, fearful that we were drifting into a military despotism. He did not believe the people of the South would ever submit to wear chains and manacles. * * * Thank God we have got rid of "our ancestors," and he hoped never to hear the word again; we ourselves, within the last two years, had established a free Government, and we would maintain and perpetuate it. But there were daily evidences that Congress wished to assume the executive office of this Government. * * * He denied the power of the Senate to bring back the commanders of our armies and examine them before a Committee to one of the back rooms of this building. * * *

The "poor soldier," to use a vulgar expression, is a hand that is played out. It was a great mistake to think the soldiers of the army were citizens. They were no longer citizens, but soldiers. In every army, the trial by court-martial was the common law, and there were occasions when the officer in command might put aside this lex scripta, and punish, and an officer who would not assume this responsibility, would deserve to have his sword broken, and his epaulettes torn from his shoulders. If Gen. BRAGG, on his retreat from Corinth, with his disorganized army, had hesitated to repress with the strong arm the first symptoms of mutiny, he was unfit for his position. He did not know whether Gen. BRAGG had shot the soldiers, but he could readily understand how emergencies might arise when it would be his duty to shoot them. If a man is deserting the army, and his example is likely to lead others to desert, he should be shot down, or cleft down, then and there.

There is a common law in the army, by which a Lieutenant even may shoot down a soldier when, during battle, he is deserting or creating disorder. It is strange that all the sympathy should be for the poor soldier, and none for the citizen. Citizens may be shot down in this city, and the Senate take no notice of the circumstance. * * * In conclusion, he denied the power of the Senate to regulate the armies in the field. He was glad the discussion on this subject had been open; if it had been conducted in secret, the people would have believed that Gen. BRAGG had been guilty of some monstrous enormity which had been smothered by the Senate.

Mr. YANCEY's sensibilities had been shocked by the announcement of what was the common law of the army. If it can be ascertained that a citizen soldier had been murdered by what the Senator from Texas (Mr. WIGFALL) had styled the common law of the army, and the fact shall be reported to the President, and if he do not remove the officer committing that murder, the President should be impeached.

Can it be that there is an unwritten law of the army in force by which the will of the Commander-in-chief shall take the place of the rules and regulations laid down for the government of the army by Congress. There can be in our army no such thing as an unwritten law, and he had been shocked to learn that there was such a law in operation. For us to let this matter drop, to smother it, as if were, would be unjust to the army, to Gen. BRAGG, and to the dignity of this body. He would vote against the proposition to refer the matter to a Select Committee, but he would vote for a resolution calling upon the President for all information in his reach on the subject.

He agreed with the Senator from Texas (Mr. WIGFALL) that there was no great danger of a military despotism, but yet the times were not without signs. There were evidences that in certain quarters the military power was encroaching upon the civil power, and should the Senate, after the Committee to which had been referred the resolution had been discharged, refuse to refer it to a select committee, or to vote for a resolution calling on the President for information on the subject, our military commanders may be emboldened to extend their encroachments on the civil power.

HON. PIERRE SOULE.

Mr. HENRY, of Kentucky, from the Military Committee, reported back the House resolution with amendments, calling upon the President to use all means in his power to affect the liberation of PIERRE SOULE, now a prisoner in Fort Warren, Boston.

Mr. CLAY was opposed to the resolution. He thought it beneath the dignity of the Government to use other means than those of retaliation for the liberation of our citizens who had been seized and confined like felons in Northern prisons. The resolution was laid on the table.

YANKEE TREATMENT OF THEIR PRISONERS.

HENRY R. McIVOR, a paroled prisoner, who arrived in this city on Tuesday, gives us some interesting information of the treatment of our prisoners who were captured by the Yankees on the 28th. After they received the news of their final disaster, they placed the prisoners behind SIGEL's Division in the retreat, exposing them to the fire of the Confederates. Messrs. SICKLES and SANFORD PICKET, two gentlemen over 70 years of age, were forced to march through the rain to Alexandria. On arriving at Alexandria some ladies brought some food to the prisoners, who had eaten nothing for four days, save three crackers, but were driven away from them at the point of the bayonet, the officer telling his men to "clear those secesh bitches" away from there. The Federals refused to parole C. BALDWIN, Assistant Surgeon to the Thirty-third Virginia. At Fortress Monroe several Germans took the oath, and when their fellow-prisoners taunted them with their shame, the Federal officer threatened to thrust his sword into them.

RICHMOND LOCALS.

MARYLAND REFUGEES ENLISTING.—The refugees from Maryland, residing in Richmond, are responding with commendable alacrity to the appeals made to them to aid in ridding their State from the bondage of Lincolnism. Since the First Maryland Regiment was disbanded, for the purpose of a more thorough and complete organization, recruiting for the Maryland Line has been actively and successfully prosecuted by officers of that regiment, and a number of companies have been raised. In addition to the companies already in camp, and ready to march, a number are now in process of formation here, whose ranks are being rapidly filled up. We understand that during this week from four to six hundred will leave, under the command of the brave Gen. STUART, to join the victorious cohorts of Stonewall JACKSON in their march through Maryland. Many more will soon follow them.

REFUSING TO TAKE CONFEDERATE MONEY.—A citizen of Fauquier, named C. W. HOFFMAN, was arrested yesterday at Charlottesville, Va., and sent to Richmond, for refusing to take Confederate money. HOFFMAN is a German, and formerly lives at the North. He came over from Fauquier with a load of something to sell, and first attracted notice by his announcement that he would take nothing but Virginia bank notes and going to the Town Treasury of Charlottesville and demanding that description of currency in exchange for an amount of corporation which he held. The Provost-Marshal here will dispose of the case as justice may seem to require.

ALL TO BE PAROLED.—According to instructions received from the Secretary of War, all the [illegible] Northward, to be exchanged as [illegible] Richmond and [illegible] Petersburg, are to be paroled and sent Northward, to be exchanged accordingly. Upwards of 5,000 will be [illegible] day, and the balance, 2,000 or more, will follow immediately.

RECAPTURED.—The man RICHARDSON, member of Capt. KAVANAUGH's Company of artillery, who escaped from Castle Thunderbolt a few weeks since, was recaptured yesterday and lodged in the Castle. RICHARDSON is charged with desertion in the face of the enemy.

A number of Yankees recently received here as prisoners of war were found, on searching them, to be plentifully supplied with bogus money of Philadelphia manufacture.

There are now at the Libby Prison 31 Northern free negroes and 16 slaves, who were recently captured with the Yankees.

LETTER FROM MISSISSIPPI.

ADDRESS OF GEN. TILGHMAN—THE EVACUATION OF BATON ROUGE—A NEGRO REGIMENT TO GUARD CONFEDERATE PRISONERS IN MISSISSIPPI.

JACKSON, Miss., Thursday, Aug. 28, 1862.

I had the pleasure of hearing Gen. TILGHMAN and Major MCCORMICO address a large and respectable concourse of citizens here, in response to a serenade given them by the brass band of the Maryland Regiment. Gen. TILGHMAN's recital of his capture and subsequent incarceration was highly interesting. Gen. BUCKNER and himself were thrown into a dungeon thirty feet under ground, and for four months and a half were excluded from the light of day, and not permitted to exchange a word with any living soul. He urged the people of the South to bring all their means and all their efforts to bear in a vigorous prosecution of the war, and cheered them with the promise of an honorable peace before the lapse of six months.

The North was sick at heart, and would yield before the invincibility of our troops and the determination of our people to reinforce the armies of the Republic to the last man. He had been assured by Judge L—— that Count MARORA had remarked that if we could succeed in holding our Capital—could demonstrate our ability to drive the foe from before it—Europe would not be long in withholding a merited recognition of our independence. Both TILGHMAN and MCCORMICO vowed never again to be caught within the walls of a mud-trap.

They had thrown away the spade, and would take their chances hereafter in the open field. The latter, in a speech of great power, begged the South never to relax their efforts until their liberties were won; to listen to no compromise, but fight on until the Stars and Bars waved in triumph over every inch of Confederate soil. The Major paid a merited compliment to Col. DIMMICK, of the Federal army. In his intercourse with the latter, he found him to be a gentleman and a Christian. Should the fortune of war ever place this officer in our power, should he fall into the hands of our soldiery, he would beg them to treat him kindly, to use him as became an honorable and liberal gentleman.

The telegraph will have informed you of the evacuation of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, by the enemy but no one is informed of the object of that sudden movement. It may be owing to the presence of a Confederate fleet below New Orleans, or to an apprehension, on the part of BUTLER, of a general rising of the population, unable any longer to endure the realities of his vindictive rule. By the evacuation of Baton Rouge, and the departure of the Federal fleet from before Vicksburgh, we have secured the control of the Mississippi for two hundred miles, enabling our army supplies to pass unmolested from the Southwest. Gen. BRACKINRIDGE will assume command of this department, and give VAN DORN an opportunity to employ his talents in a more active field. Should the former succeed in delivering New Orleans from the yoke of BUTLER, the fruits of that deliverance would be more substantial than the most brilliant encounter in the field.

The dry weather, so hurtful to our corn, will enable the planter to gather in his crop of cotton without stain or dust, and dry it well before storing it away for future demand. The present crop, though small, will exceed in quality the picking of last year. Owing to the scarcity of bagging and rope, the crop, after picking and drying, will be stored under shelter unginned. The late foreign news has had a dispiriting effect on the markets for cotton in the South. Cotton is drooping, and planters less exacting in their demands.

The people of the South, in their simplicity, take PALMERSTON and Queen VICTORIA at their word. It is their own strong arms and sturdy hearts that must achieve their country's independence. So be it. Those who help themselves never lack friends. We should be ashamed of ourselves for having so long sought an acknowledgment of our independence.—Correspondence Richmond Dispatch.

Important Decision Under the New Act Relative to Attorneys in New-York City.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Justice Bosworth.

Heives vs. Kingsland et al.—The plaintiff's action was begun by his attorney, Mr. Peter Mulvey. The defendants thereupon moved to set aside all of plaintiff's proceedings, on the ground that Mr. Mulvey, his attorney, was not authorized to practice as an attorney and counselor-at-law in the courts of this State. The motion is founded on chapter 484 of the Laws of 1862, page 970, section 1, which declares that "no person shall ask, demand or receive, directly or indirectly, any compensation for appearing as attorney in any of the courts in the City and County of New-York, nor be permitted to make it a business to practice as an attorney in any of said courts, unless he shall have been regularly admitted by the Supreme Court of the State of New-York to practice as an attorney," &c.

BOSWORTH, J.—Mr. Mulveyr was admitted an attorney of the New-York Common Pleas on the 24th, and of this Court on the 27th day of August, 1844. But he has not been admitted by the Supreme Court of the State to practice as an attorney and counselor in that Court. Although there is much in the provision of chap. 484 of the Laws of 1862, indicating that it was mainly designed to affect the Justices' Courts, civil and criminal, in this City, yet there would seem to be no reason why a person should be prohibited from practicing in a Justices' Court, and at the same time be allowed to practice in this Court, and in the New-York Common Pleas. The language of the statute is broad enough to cover the case in question, and I do not perceive that it is unconstitutional. (Laws of 1847, vol. 1, p. 342, sec. 75; vol. 2, id. p. 547, sections 46 and 47; 3 Barb. 196; Laws of 1862, p. 970, sections 1 and 2.) I do not think the proceedings are to be set aside as a matter of course, but they will be stayed until a duly admitted attorney is substituted in place of Mr. Mulvey, and unless such substitution be made by a day to be specified, the proceedings will be set aside.

Arrest on Civil Process—Contempt—Habeas Corpus.

SUPERIOR COURT—CHAMBERS.

Before Justice Bosworth.

The People ex rel. Hermon Rothchilds vs. James Lynch, Sheriff, &c.—A bill was originally filed in an action brought by Patrick J. Keary against Jacob Rothchilds and Hermon Rothchilds, to set aside certain bills of sale made by them and one Samuel Brandenburgh to Hermon Rothchilds. The Court decided the bills of sale fraudulent as against the plaintiff, Patrick J. Keary, and in February last ordered a reference to Robert D. Livingstone, to take an account of the proceeds of the property received by Hermon Rothchilds under the fraudulent bills of sale, and directing said Hermon to pay over the same to James V. Kearney, as receiver in the case. The accounting was had before the referee, who found in the hands of Hermon Rothchilds the sum of $459 96, and directed the immediate payment of the same to the receiver, and also to assign to the receiver certain accounts, amounting to $135.

The referee's report was filed on the 13th of June, exceptions filed thereto, and the same confirmed July 15.

On plaintiff's affidavit that a demand had been made upon Rothchilds for the money and the assignments, on behalf of the receiver, a precept was issued by Justice Robertson to the Sheriff, committing Hermon Rothchilds to close custody until he should pay over the money and execute the assignments. Subsequently a habeas corpus was granted by the Justice, to which the Sheriff made a return, producing the body of Rothchilds. The return was traversed by the relator, denying that any rule or order for the payment of the money or the assignments had ever been made by the Court or served on him; and, secondly, that any order of attachment for his arrest had ever been issued.

After argument on these points, the Court took the papers and reserved decision.

H. D. Lapaugh for relator; C. P. Leslie for respondent.

Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Gleet or Gonorrhœa of long standing, where all internal remedies have failed, permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance, failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD & CO., No. 12 Laight-st., the only place.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb, unless his remedy is used. This is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians, in regard to some pitiful patient, who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it; and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

WOUNDED IN THE LATE BATTLES.

The following proclamation was issued on Friday, at Hagerstown, Md.:

"PROCLAMATION.—The citizens are requested to suspend their ordinary business and give aid in bringing in the wounded from the battle-field, and providing for them.

"Information as to what is wanted, and passes, will be furnished at this office.

"If this request be complied with, it may prevent the necessity of a peremptory order on the subject.

"E. SPENCER MILLER, Provost Marshal.

ARRIVAL OF THE REMAINS OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL MANSFIELD.

Last evening the mortal remains of Brigadier-Gen. JOSEPH K. P. MANSFIELD arrived in this City by the Camden and Amboy route. Col. AMEY took charge of the body, and forwarded it by the eight o'clock train to Middletown, Conn., where it will be interred.

THE PRESIDENT AND SUNDAY'S VICTORY.

On Monday last the President sent the following dispatch to his Illinois home, announcing McCLELLAN'S victory of Sunday:

WASHINGTON, Monday, Sept. 15—4 P. M.

To Hon. J. K. Dubois:

I now consider it safe to say that Gen. MCCLELLAN has gained a great victory over the great rebel army in Maryland, between Frederick and Hagerstown. He is now pursuing the flying forces.

A. LINCOLN.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-COL. PARISEN.

Among the heroes who fell at the battle of Antietam, on the 17th inst., was Lieut.-Col. PHILIP J. PARISEN, of the Fifty-seventh New-York Volunteers. Col. PARISEN was well-known in this City, and was formerly conductor on the Hudson River Railroad. He was carried off the field by his orderly, JOHN MCCARTY, assisted by two comrades, both of whom were killed while performing this duty. Col. PARISEN was 38 years of age, and leaves a wife and five children.

ARRIVAL OF TWELVE HUNDRED REBEL PRISONERS AT BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Saturday, Sept. 20.

Twelve hundred more rebel prisoners arrived here this morning from Fredrick, captured by Gen. MCCLELLAN. They are now embarking for Fort Delaware. Another train is on the way. The prisoners are dressed in all manner of garbs and are very dirty and ragged.

PENNSYLVANIA MILITIA.

The Washington Star of Friday evening says:

"We regret to have to state that some portion of the Pennsylvania Militia assembled recently for the defence of their State, object to marching into Maryland to defend Pennsylvania there from invasion. No official information of the fact has reached here, we apprehend, though it is doubtless true. It cannot be possible that a storm of public opinion at home will fail to cure the recreants of such shameless poltroonery in twenty-four hours. Such militia should be promptly drafted for three years by Presidential call, en masse, divided out in small squads among all the different regiments wanting filling up, and kept in the front ranks in every engagement, by prick of the bayonet, until rebel bullets rid the country of any possibility that the spirit actuating them may be propagated."

AFFAIRS AT HARRISBURGH.

Continuation of the War Excitement—Character of the Recruits—Pennsylvania in Earnest—Condition of the Capital—Gen. Reynolds and the Organization of Forces—No Martial Law—Postponement of the Draft.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HARRISBURGH, PENN., Tuesday, Sept. 16, 1862.

The war excitement here continues unabated—if anything, on the increase. So sublime a spectacle of the uprising of an entire people, I believe, was never before exhibited to the world. We read, with kindling eyes, of how, during the first French revolution—at the magic words, "Mourir pour la patrie," placarded on the walls of Paris—thousands rushed eagerly to enroll their names. But Paris never witnessed a grander sight than we are now having at Harrisburgh.

And let our enemies beware of setting this down to mere Northern excitability and demonstrativeness. It is not for nothing that I have, for two days past, been witnessing aged mothers clasping their stalwart sons in their arms by the public roadside—sisters and wives and sweethearts, with streaming eyes, stealing a last kiss from their loved ones, with whom they think they are parting forever. It is no idle, holiday parade which has torn these men from their honest pursuits of industry, and from happy and comfortable—often luxurious—homes, to face the dangers and privations of a soldier's life. Nor are these men the "scum of our cities," as the rebels have insolently called our armies hitherto. The men that Pennsylvania is now sending forth represent all classes and conditions of life—every kind of trade and profession; and this not by compulsory draft, but at the instantaneous call of her Governor.

There are individual companies already here from Pittsburgh and other places, each of which represents a business capital of some millions of dollars. Judges, preachers, physicians, merchants, lawyers, artists, and men of every other profession, are found side by side with the brawny and honest sons of physical labor, shouldering the musket. Here is to be seen a learned Judge in the ranks, commanded by one of his own peers—there a Preacher-Captain, instructing his flock how to do battle; and there again, some merchant or boss-mechanic, led on by one who was but yesterday their poor clerk or dependant. It is romance and poetry of the highest order, simmered down to the vulgar level of every-day life, and bewilders any one who seriously thinks of what is passing before him.

This is, after all, the kind of material upon which a country can faithfully depend in her hour of trial. There is not a man among the ten thousand now congregated in this city alone but who carries his life in his hand, knowing full well why he has taken up arms, and determined to demand a heavy reckoning from those who have caused them so much anguish, and spread such consternation among their firesides.

Nor are we to suppose that this war-spirit, now fully awakened, is going to slumber again as soon as it is made evident that the rebels do not, at present at least, intend an invasion of Pennsylvania. The people here are fully alive to the dangers that threaten them. They know that so long as a rebel foot is in Maryland,—so long as Baltimore and Washington are threatened and our armies have not driven the rebels back to their own desolate lands,—so long, in fact, as rebellion yet lives, there can be no actual safety for this State. Besides, they have loyalty enough to break through State demarcations. They feel that a blow dealt against our cause in Missouri, Tennessee, or Kentucky, is a blow against us all, and, having taken up arms, they are ready to go wherever the Union cause may require them.

The First Regiment of State Militia, Col. MCCORMICK which left this place last Saturday, was met yesterday by Mr. WILSON, the telegraphic operator. They were at Greencastle, ten miles from Chambersburgh, and only eleven miles this side of Hagerstown. The men are all represented as being in the best of spirits and anxious to meet the enemy. If General MCCLELLAN desires it, they say they will go with him into Virginia. The regiment was accompanied by the Anderson troop. With such stuff in our militia, what may we not expect of our troops seasoned to war?

Recruits are constantly arriving here. From early dawn yesterday until quite late at night, every train was bringing in its patriotic freight, until we now have troops from every county in the State. Camp Curtin is crowded to overflowing; the beautiful grounds of the Capitol is one vast encampment covered with tents; the Senate and House of Representatives turned into a barracks, as well as every other room in the Capitol not immediately required for executive purposes; the Court-house is also appropriated to the soldiers, and, indeed every available place has been seized upon as a war "dépôt;" the private houses, in the meantime, opening their doors to and lavishing their hospitality upon all the brave boys who choose to partake.

The news which came last night created, as might naturally be expected, no little excitement and delight among the citizens and soldiery, especially when it came to be rumored that Gen. MCCLELLAN had sent a dispatch to Gov. CURTIN, personally complimenting him upon the behavior of the Pennsylvania troops. A Pennsylvanian is as clannish as a Scotchman or a Swiss, and I have often heard him taken to task for this propensity; but it sometimes does one good to hear a man crow lustily, if he has the right to do so; and there is no denying that the sons of this "keystone of the Federal arch" have a right to crow about their part in this war. A State which has already sent 150,000 volunteers to the field, and which can, at the sudden call of her Governor—and within one week—send 50,000 more volunteers to defend her borders, has a right to crow, and pretty loudly too.

Gen. REYNOLDS is busily occupied in organizing the troops, as fast as they arrive, into regiments. Several left during the night and are leaving to-day, fully equipped, all but tents, which are very difficult to hurry up, so that, if the weather should be bad, our new soldiers will have to rough it at the very commencement. Last evening, a large amount of commissary stores (20,000 rations) were sent on to Chambersburgh, and additional stores are being hurried on, so that they will not stand in need of any necessaries. The exact destination of the troops is not known. Some think it is to Harper's Ferry to reinforce the garrison at that point, or to retake them, should they have fallen again into the hands of the enemy before reinforcements arrived. At any rate, these men are ready for anything, "from pitch-and-toss to manslaughter"—and, by present appearances, they will not have to wait long before proving their grit.

The report was altogether false about martial law existing here. The utmost order reigns everywhere, and nothing can more clearly prove the inherent respect of law and solid character of this people than to notice such a state of things in a city suddenly crowded by soldiers as this is. It is true the midnight air was made vocal by song, but then they were loyal and patriotic songs, sung by bands of men about to leave home under the most thrilling circumstances, and every loyal heart in the city beat in chorus. No person is allowed to purchase a ticket at any of the railroads leading from this city without a pass from the Mayor, but beyond this, I hear of no interference whatever with the ordinary pursuits of business and locomotion.

Yesterday we had quite a Summer's day, unpleasantly warm for the season; but to-day we have a cold, cloudy atmosphere. If this denotes hard weather, and we should have heavy rains to swell the Potomac, the rebels are likely to be caught in a tight place, unless they have already escaped, or there should be, unfortunately, some disappointing afterclap about the good news of yesterday. The telegrams, however, followed each other so clearly and circumstantially that everybody here believes we have really achieved a great victory, and is hoping for the best.

The draft which was to have taken place yesterday has been postponed to the 25th inst. The authorities have been induced to make this decision, to accommodate the officers who are preparing the draft. But if matters continue as at present, there soon will be no necessity for a draft, or material to draft from, as all the manhood of the State is already rushing to arms.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Sept. 20.

THE RECONNOISANCE TO THOROUGHFARE GAP.

The leader of the expedition which made the brilliant reconnoisance to Thoroughfare Gap, of which I sent an account last night, was Lieut.-Col. BAINTON. The thirty prisoners captured were brought here today. It appears that Gen. EWELL, who since the last battle of Bull Run has been lying wounded at a farm house, near Thoroughfare Gap, becoming apprised of the defeat of the rebels in Maryland, at once ordered himself to be conveyed to Richmond. He started in an ambulance at 11 o'clock A. M., only four hours previous to the arrival of our cavalry. Gen EWELL'S leg has been amputated, and he is doing well. Upon learning of LEE'S defeat in Maryland, he exclaimed: "It's all up, boys—pack up, and let us be off, or the Yankees will be on us."

THE ATTACK ON WASHINGTON, N. C.

The Navy Department has received a communication from the Acting Lieutenant commanding the gunboat Louisiana, dated Washington, N. C., Sept. 8, which says:

"On Saturday, the 6th instant, the enemy attacked the town and gained an entrance. We went to quarters immediately. At 5 o'clock in the morning we received volleys of musketry across our decks, when we opened fire with shell, grape, and solid shot doing great execution, killing a number of rebels, and finally driving them back. At six o'clock in the morning the Louisiana continued shelling, throwing shot over the town, among the retreating enemy, killing and wounding many.

At 8 o'clock in the morning, having driven them from the reach of our guns, we ceased firing and piped down. During the action the gunboat Picket blew up, killing her Captain and eighteen men; the remainder of the crew were brought on board of this vessel and attended to by Assistant-Surgeon BRADLEY. It gives me pleasure to testify to the handsome manner in which our guns were managed by Acting Master HOOKER, of this vessel. The crew have received my thanks."

Immediately on the receipt of this dispatch, the Navy Department, with its usual promptness in such cases, promoted Acting Master HOOKER to Acting Volunteer Lieutenant, and ordered him to the command of the steamer Victoria.

DEATH OF COL. DWIGHT.

Col. DWIGHT, of the Second Massachusetts Regiment, who was wounded on Wednesday, died yesterday.

AN ORDER REVOKED.

So much of "General Orders" No. 125 from the War Department as directs the dismissal of Lieut. JOHN SIMPSON, of the Ninety-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers and Lieut. Y. L. CHRISTIE, Aid-de-Camp, has by direction of the President been revoked. Satisfactory evidence having been submitted that Capt. SOL. J. HOUCK, of the Seventy-first Ohio Volunteers, did not advise the surrender of Clarksville, Tenn., and that he signed the card justifying its surrender under misapprehension of its contents, the President directs that so much of "General Orders" No. 120 as cashiered him be revoked. Additional Paymaster JAMES MANN is dismissed from the service by direction of the President for absence without leave and neglect of duty.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Capt. ALONZO MCCOY, Quartermaster of the Eleventh Massachusetts Volunteers, committed suicide to-day in a temporary fit of insanity.

ACCIDENT AND LOSS OF LIFE.

A boat containing three gentlemen was upset this evening in crossing the Potomac, and Capt. E. K. MILES, of the New-York Ninth Regiment, was drowned. He was on sick leave, and had not yet reported for duty. His body was not recovered.

A WARNING AGAINST THE INDIANS.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
OFFICE INDIAN AFFAIRS, Sept. 19, 1862.

From information received at this Department, deemed sufficiently reliable to warrant me in so doing, I consider it my duty to warn all persons contemplating the crossing of the Plains this Fall to Utah or the Pacific coast, that there is good reason to apprehend hostilities on the part of the Bannock and Shoshone, or Snake Indians, as well as the Indians upon the Plains and along the Platte River.

The Indians referred to have, during the past Summer, committed several robberies and murders. They are numerous, powerful, and warlike, and, should they generally assume a hostile attitude, are capable of rendering the emigrant routes across the Plains extremely perilous. Hence this warning.

By order of the Secretary of the Interior,
CHARLES E. MIX, Acting Commissioner.

CIRCULAR FROM THE SURGEON-GENERAL.

SURGEON-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17, 1862.

CIRCULAR No. 11.—The Military Hospitals will be open to the authorized agents of Soldiers' Relief Associations and other civil Societies, from 12 o'clock M. to 6 o'clock P. M., daily; and to the friends of patients and other visitors, if, in the judgment of the Surgeon in charge, their visits will not be prejudicial to the welfare of the sick.

Medical officers in charge of general hospitals are directed to examine carefully each provision return, comparing the same with the amount of subsistence stores on hand; they will expend the hospital fund as it accrues for the benefit of the sick, and especially in increasing the variety and improving the quality of their diet.

It is believed that many of the complaints respecting the insufficiency of the diet, are due to a mistaken zeal on the part of some medical officers to accumulate a large hospital fund.

WILLIAM A. HAMMOND,
Surgeon-General U. S. A.

FROM PORT ROYAL.—The New South is the title of a sheet, about fifteen by eighteen inches in size, which is published at Port Royal, S. C., every Saturday morning, at 5 cents per copy. Its assortment of miscellaneous reading displays good judgment, its collation of local news industry, and its editorial page more sense and spirit, without the venom, than the newspapers of Charleston and Columbia combined. That so small a sheet should be marked by so many excellences is sufficiently explained by the fact that its editor, Mr. H. J. WINKS, is a graduate of the TIMES Office.

IMPORTANT FROM THE SOUTHWEST

A Great Battle at Iuka, Mississippi.

Defeat of 15,000 Rebels Under Price, by Gen. Rosecrans.

PURSUIT OF THE FLYING ENEMY.

CAIRO, Saturday, Sept. 20.

Gen. ROSECRANS commenced moving from Rienzi to Iuka, Mississippi, yesterday morning. During the afternoon his advance came in contact with the enemy's pickets, and heavy skirmishing ensued until night. The fight was renewed this morning and lasted until nearly noon, when the enemy gave way in a southerly direction.

Our loss is stated to be between 400 and 500 killed and wounded. The rebel loss was not ascertained, but is believed to be greater than ours.

Gen. LITTLE, formerly Governor of Mississippi, was killed in the fight, and Gen. WHITEFIELD was wounded and taken prisoner.

The rebel force is stated to be 15,000, under Gen PRICE. The battle took place two miles east of Iuka.

Gen. ROSECRANS is in pursuit of the enemy.

THE REBELS IN KENTUCKY.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Saturday, Sept. 20.

Lebanon Junction is the furthest Southern point open to telegraphic communication.

About 3,000 rebel cavalry are at Lebanon.

About nineteen thousand rebel infantry encamped last night about two miles east of Muldrough's Hill, on the Pike. The advanced pickets of this force passed through New-Haven, en route to Bardstown, this morning.

OUR LOUISVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

BRAGG AFTER SOUTHERN KENTUCKY AND NORTHERN TENNESSEE—THE BEST GENERALSHIP NEEDED TO CLEAR AND KEEP OUT THE ENEMY.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Monday, Sept. 15, 1862.

Col. WILDER'S Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Sixty-seventh and Eighty-third Indiana, with four pieces of artillery, at Munfordsville, certainly repulsed, with heavy loss, 4,000 to 6,000 Louisiana rebels, under DUNCAN and SCOTT. This occurred yesterday forenoon. Our troops were behind intrenchments and rifle-pits. The enemy may have been reinforced since, and have renewed the attack. A portion of KIRBY SMITH'S force may have gone to the assistance of BRAGG. HEATH is reported to have moved in haste from the vicinity of Cincinnati on the 11th. The invaders' demonstrations upon Northern Kentucky may be diversions from their real points of attack—Munfordsville, Bowling Green and Nashville. They may be after securing first Northern Tennessee and Southern Kentucky, and their movements in force upon the line of the Nashville Railroad, above and below Munfordsville, may be to draw BUELL from Nashville for the protection of his communications, or to distract and divide his troops, and attack them in detail.

The enemy's movements and designs and numbers may be far less known to us than ours are to them. We need the best generalship to permanently rescue Tennessee and Kentucky. It will soon be manifest whether we have it. The armies of Gens. BUELL and WRIGHT and GRANT ought to outnumber and outflank the invaders, and capture or annihilate them. But if we are to be constantly outflanked and outmanœuvered, surprised, befogged and bewildered, we shall soon have fallen back to where we were a year ago. But I am not disposed to croak or find fault, and all will turn out well for us sooner or later.

Too many of us in Kentucky, even now, don't lift a finger to help the Government and State authorities. When action and enthusiasm are required, we do naught but sit still and talk, grumble and groan and find fault with everybody and everything around us. When the capture and sacking of Louisville, and conscription into the rebel army, stare us in the face, we hang back from volunteering to save our city and ourselves.

Gen. BOYLE, to preserve peace and good order among civilians, soldiers and officers, orders the closing of all places where liquors are retailed in Louisville and Jeffersonville. "Keepers of hotels and others are forbid selling or giving liquors to any persons to be drank in the rooms of their houses. Any violating this order will be arrested and imprisoned, and the liquors in their houses confiscated. All officers and soldiers galloping their horses through the streets, endangering the lives of citizens and others, will be arrested."

Surveyor CORTON advertises that permits are required for all goods south of the Ohio, above or below Louisville. Transportation of coin or bullion to any State or section, heretofore declared under insurrection, prohibited. All cotton or merchandise purchased and paid for therein, directly or indirectly, in gold or silver, forfeited to the United States. No ardent spirits shipped to territory occupied by forces of the United States.
